Roosevelt Set To Speed Aid, May Discuss Neutral Shift

Conference Today Will Weigh Action On Lend Measure, Help for Russia

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

Speeding up war aid to Britain and Russia, smoothing of the way for the new $5,985,000,000 lend-lease bill, and proposals for revising or repealing the neutrality act threatened last week to dominate executive and legislative action here through the week.

President Roosevelt, on his way back to the Capital from Hyde Park, summoned a group of Capitol Hill leaders to meet with him this morning, when it was expected the outstanding aspects of recent gloomy war news would be explored in relation to the resulting need for this country to expand its help to Hitler's foes,—and quickly.

Invited to the conference are Vice President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, House Majority Leader McCormack, Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee, Chairman Woodrum, of the subcommittee that will be in charge of the lease-lend bill, Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Harry L. Hopkins, directing head of the entire lend-lease organization.

Neutrality Skirmish a Theme

In view of Connally's statement last week that Congress would soon be called on to consider Neutrality Act changes or outright repeal, there was little doubt here last night that this morning's conference would deal to some extent with that matter. The Neutrality Act now forbids the entering of combat zones by American ships and likewise forbids the arming of American merchant craft to resist attack by raiders.

However, it was indicated on Mr. Roosevelt's train that no new proposals would be put before Congress until the lend-lease measure is out of the way, and that Administration efforts will be concentrated on quick enactment of that measure. William D. Hassett, presidential secretary, said today's conference was called to discuss the new program of material help, and that quick action is the goal.

While the President was returning on his special train, Appropriations Chairman Cannon worked through Sunday on tasks preparatory to tomorrow's opening of hearings on the second lend-lease measure.

He predicted last night that the hearings can be completed by Friday, after which the Deficiency subcommittee in charage will consider some one hundred million dollars of deficiency requests. The latter, it is the intention, will be joined with the lend-lease estimates in a single general appropriation measure, providing a legislative short cut that may save some time when it reaches the floor.

Top Men Will Testify

Hearing witnesses are expected to include Edward R. Stettinius, of the lend-lease organization; Donald Nelson, executive director of SPAB; Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox, Army Chief of Staff Marshall and William S. Knudsen, director of OPM.

Cannon estimated the bill could reach the floor during the week of October 6, and he predicted little opposition to it, either in committee or in the House.

Whether the Administration forces could avoid any Congressional fight over aid to Russia still was a matter of speculation, but their deter-

A 'Grave Social Error'

Errol Flynn, Fidler and Wife In Brawl; She Used Wrong Fork

FIDLER | MRS. FIDLER | FLYNN

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, Sept. 21.—Playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the dance orchestra halted a brief but spirited fisticuff in a night club early today involving Actor Errol Flynn, Jimmie Fidler, movie writer, and the latter's wife, Bobbie.

When the National Anthem began, all three stood at attention and afterward were separated by friends. The crowd cheered.

Flynn got a slight gouge in the ear. He said it was done with a fork.

"I didn't mind Mrs. Fidler jabbing me with the fork," said Flynn, "but she made the very grave social error of using the wrong fork."

"Fidler has told one too many lies about the motion picture business," Flynn told interviewers. "That's why I went up to his table and told him what I thought about him. I put my left fist up against his chin and gave him a slap with my right hand on the side of the head. I said: 'You're not worth a fist.'"

Fidler said he was struck twice by the actor.

"I never rose from my seat until the second blow," he said, "and then I took a half-hearted swing at him. I don't make a specialty of boxing or fighting. Bobbie certainly did a better job than I did, because she inflicted the only real damage that Flynn suffered.

"For some time Flynn has been carrying a grudge against me as a result of certain things that I have written and said over the radio."

Mrs. Fidler denied she used a fork on the actor.

Testifying before an isolationist-dominated Senate subcommittee here last Monday, Fidler charged that nine recent motion pictures contained anti-Nazi war propaganda.

Because of his criticism of this alleged propaganda, Fidler told the subcommittee, Hollywood producers attempted to suppress publication of his newspaper column.

Gale Headed For Maryland, Virginia Coast

D. C. May Feel Lash; Louisianans Flee Hurricane's Path

A "well-developed" storm was moving on the Virginia-Maryland coast last night, a hurricane was striking at Louisiana from the Gulf, forcing dwellers in low-lying sections to flee their homes.

The coastal disturbance centered last night 360 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras and was slowly pushing northeastward preceded by strong winds and gales. Storm warnings were issued for small craft along the seaboard.

Indications that the tail of the storm might lash the District were to be seen in the forecast for today of increasing easterly winds. W. P. Day, forecaster, said last night that a more definite forecast as to whether the storm would hit Washington would be available today.

Navy Base Evacuated

The second and worse storm—1000 miles away—was centered last night 300 miles south of New Orleans. Because the low-lying naval section base community of Burrwood, La., lay in the path of the disturbance, the 200 residents were evacuated by Coast Guard cutter to higher areas.

Coast Guard planes flew over a wide area dropping warning leaflets to boats, island residents and persons living in the lowlands. Four hundred Army planes in south Louisiana were dispersed to safer places. Nine Louisiana Red Cross chapters were warned by national headquarters here to organize for emergency feeding and housing, as a precautionary measure, and the Army assigned a fleet of trucks to aid the rescue activities.

The Atlantic storm started a fire aboard a freighter off the southern coast and delayed at least four ships en route to New York from South America and Caribbean ports, according to the Associated Press.

The fire broke out on the Com-

Jews Greeted On New Year By Roosevelt

Message Calls on U. S. For Rededication To Task Before Us

Roosevelt's Message

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 21.—President Roosevelt in a Jewish New Year's message today called upon the Nation to rededicate itself "to the task which lies before us in order that all peoples may live as equals."

His message was read by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, noted Jewish leader, in a C. B. S. broadcast sponsored by the United Jewish Appeal commemorating the opening of the year 5702 in the Hebrew calendar.

The text of the President's message:

"At this tragic hour in modern civilization, I extend to the Jewish people of America my sincere greetings for the New Year, in the confident hope that the temporary darkness which appears to encompass the world shall not extinguish the light of liberty and the blessings of peace and freedom. Accordingly, with a united devotion to the just cause of tolerance and peace, we must rededicate ourselves to the task which lies before us in order that all peoples may live as equals."

Other Leaders Speak

His theme keynoted similar addresses by Mayor LaGuardia, Gov. Lehman, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and other public officials, who emphasized in Rosh Hashanah messages America's tradition of security and religious freedom.

In Washington, at the same time, Secretary of State Hull issued a message of greeting to American Jews, saying:

"At this season of the observance

That Red Light Means 'Stop'

21 Pay $2 Each for Walking Across the Street; Drive Is On

Twenty-one persons were arrested over the weekend as part of a drive by Acting Police Chief Edward Kelly to enforce pedestrian control regulations.

Most of the walkers were arrested by police of the Second Precinct who wrote the names of ten persons on station records. Four were arrested by the Traffic Division, six in No. 13 Precinct, and one by the Women's Bureau. Each person arrested elected to forfeit $2 collateral.

Last Monday, Maj. Kelly sent a memorandum to his precinct commanders demanding they instruct all men to arrest any person found violating the pedestrian control laws. Crossing against a red light and crossing between intersections are violations of local ordinances.

The officers assigned to the Second Precinct, Pvts. P. C. Lewis and M. R. Luebkert, conducted a special drive on Seventh Street Northwest above Massachusetts Avenue, arresting eight persons for walking across the street against the red light.

Luebkert, who said complaints had come to his precinct from Police Inspector Arthur E. Miller, in charge of traffic, about violations of the pedestrian laws, said the violators were taken immediately to the precinct.

One man said he was a visitor in town and did not know about the regulation. He had to put up $2

School Bells Ring Today For 85,000

Registration Likely To Reach 96,000 By End of Week, Officials Believe

It's back to school for some 85,000 District children at 9 a. m. today.

Following early morning subjection to scrubbed ears and parental admonitions, pupils will be eased from vacation days into the ways of books and chalk dust today with little more than introductions by teachers.

Class work is not expected to get under way fully until Wednesday when Jewish children, excused from attendance today and tomorrow because of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish new year, return to school. By the end of the week registration in the school system is expected to reach about 96,000, say officials.

Despite the great influx of population brought here by defense jobs, school officials anticipate only about 3400 more students enrolled in the District schools this year than last.

Last Enrollment, 90,305

However, shifting populations within the city and overcrowding of schools in nearby Maryland and Virginia counties have made it almost impossible for school officials to accurately determine how heavy the capacity of school facilities will be taxed.

Public school enrollment in the District when summer vacations started last June was 90,305 and the children were housed in 173 buildings. Since then, four school buildings have been closed and only one new eight-room unit has been added.

A large part of the expected increase in the number of pupils is centered in the Anacostia and Benning areas—centers of the District's defense population. Portable schools and part-time schedules will be employed in these areas.

Classes to Be Staggered

The Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, built to accommodate 1200 pupils, will conduct "staggered classes," and no nonresident pupils will be admitted. It is anticipated that the school will have an enrollment well above the more than 1500 pupils who attended last year.

Colleges in the Washington area will also open their fall season today. Opening their doors this morning are Georgetown, George Washington University, Catholic University, and Wilson Teachers College.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, will greet students in special exercises at 11 a. m. as the university's school of medicine opens its 117th year. Dr. William Thornwall Davis will deliver the principal address.

At Catholic University, Dr. Roy J. Deferrari, director general, said yesterday that the deans of all the schools have arranged for additional office help to expedite school opening, so that all classes and special lectures can begin as scheduled at 8:10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

$552 Expenditure May Bring Movie Quiz to Showdown

By the Associated Press

Controversy within the Senate over the investigation of the movies approached a step nearer a showdown yesterday when Chairman Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, signed vouchers for $552.04 in expenditures by the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee inquiring into alleged war propaganda.

Clark said the vouchers would be submitted to the Senate Audit and Control Committee, headed by Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois. Lucas announced Saturday that he would not approve any expenditures until he was informed how long the inquiry was going to be carried on and how much would be spent.

The two vouchers thus far signed call for payment of $3 and expenses to Jimmy Fidler and George Fisher, Hollywood commentators, who testified last week.

Fidler turned in a bill for $287.54, which included airplane transportation from California to Washington and return. Fisher's bill was $264.50.

Petain Pleads With His Countrymen Not to Provoke Any New Reprisals

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Sept. 21.—German machine guns, troops and armored cars will move in against any organized attempt to foment revolution in occupied France, authorized sources from Paris said tonight.

Marshal Petain had just begged Frenchmen to quit attacks on Germans to save all conquered France from reprisals.

The Paris sources said the reprisal shootings of hostages and other executions, which up to now have claimed 35 lives, would be "a mere drop in the bucket to what may happen if sabotage and terrorism continues."

Foreign Agents Blamed

In a radio broadcast condemning the assaults on German army men, Marshal Petain declared:

"These attacks are criminal. They may lead to new troubles.

"They must be blamed on foreign agents because it is not in French tradition to attack soldiers in the dark while they are doing their duty."

The authoritative sources from Paris said that despite demands of the eastern front there were still enough German soldiers to enforce peace in occupied France "even if the French don't want to keep it themselves."

The source said this was the situation as seen by officials at Paris:

"There are three groups in the occupied zone—the French, the Germans and the Communists. A small group of Communists is leading Frenchmen to murder, shoot in the back and kill like dogs simple German soldiers who officially are only on duty. In no matter what country, in no matter what kind of situation, the same principle stands: 'Don't let the other fellow get the best of you.'"

The sources asserted the official view was that there would be no order in Paris without German troops, that Frenchmen would be fighting in the streets because

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 21 (AP).—A report circulated here today that Germany had asked Bulgaria to supply 200,000 soldiers to take over the policing of France to free German troops for the Russian campaign.

Nazis Claim 28 Ships Were Sunk In Iceland Area

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 21.—The Germans disclosed for the first time today that mass submarine operations credited last week with sinking 28 merchantmen were in "Icelandic waters."

The German spokesman said when news of the attack was first announced that it was "Germany's answer of deeds instead of words" to President Roosevelt's order to attack Axis warcraft in American defense waters.

The recapitulation covered sinkings announced during the week of September 13 to 20 and gave losses in the period as 250,300 tons.

U-boats were credited with six additional ships in the North Atlantic and speedboats destroyed four ships off the British coast.

U. S. Charges Profiteering In Chemicals

Price Officials Ask Trust Action; Protests Reported at 20 a Day

By the Associated Press

The Justice Department, it was learned yesterday, has been asked to take action under the antitrust laws against "priority profiteers" who have raised prices of some chemicals from 100 to 400 per cent.

Officials of the Price Administration said the offending concerns, numbering more than two score, were mainly brokers, many in business less than a year.

They are charging exorbitant prices, officials said, for commonly used chemicals essential to the manufacture of drugs, paints, textiles, dyes and plastics. A large part of their business is believed to be with small users, who fear more drastic priority restrictions and who feel compelled to buy at any price asked.

Hundreds of Complaints

Officials said they had received hundreds of complaints of excessive prices charged by such brokers and were receiving protests now at the rate of about 20 a day.

Officials said many brokers were buying chemicals and storing them in warehouses. They contended this amounted to an attempt to "corner" a market and was a monopolistic practice under the Sherman Act.

Although the chemical situation is receiving first attention from the Price Administration, consideration is being given also to some metals. Henderson received one complaint that a concern was selling zinc to firms holding priority ratings at 7½ cents a pound and offering it to other users at 16 cents a pound.

The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board is expected to act Tuesday on a proposal by Donald M. Nelson, priorities director, that direct action be taken to force compliance with priorities regulations.

Protest to Henderson

Officials said that Nelson contemplated shutting off supplies entirely from two, and possibly three, large concerns in the metals industries for continued violation of priority orders.

Spokesmen from the C. I. O. textile workers union said that "bootlegging" of chemicals at high prices had appeared in the textile industry.

Strike Ties Up 3 More Ships; Total Now 19

Union Threatens Call On Every Foreign-Run Vessel as It Arrives

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 21.—Three more ships were tied up today by the Seafarer's International Union (A. F. L.), bringing the total of strike-bound vessels throughout the country to 19, and the union reiterated it would strike every foreign-run ship under contract with it "as soon as it hits an American port."

S.I.U. heads said the three ships, all owned by the Alcoa Steamship Co., were the Alcoa Pathfinder docked at Brooklyn; the Alcoa Patriot, at Tacoma, and the Alcoa Cutter, at New York. All arrived yesterday.

The union is demanding war bonuses for crews on ships operating in West Indian waters.

Counter Action

The move, a union spokesman declared, was a counter action to that of the United States Maritime Commission which took over the freighters Alcoa Banner and Alcoa Trader and dispatched them from New York with Government-recruited crews. They sailed yesterday with cargoes for American bases at Bermuda and Trinidad.

Capt. Granville Conway, manager of the New York district office of the commission, said he was making arrangements to dispatch probably Wednesday the third requisitioned vessel, the Alcoa Scout, now being loaded at the Alcoa Co.'s Weehawken, N. J., piers.

Demands Bonuses

The ships were seized after the union refused to arbitrate the bonus dispute with shipowners. The union demands war bonuses for seamen sailing to the West Indies because such trips are in "dangerous waters."

Capt. Conway said any profits from the operation of requisitioned vessels would go to the United States Treasury. The commission has appointed the Alcoa company agent for the three requisitioned vessels, but the company will receive only the usual supervisory fees paid shipping agents.

The crews manning the Banner and the Trader will receive prevailing wages, without bonus, Conway said, able bodied seamen and firemen getting $90 monthly and oilers, $100.

Life's Fine in Army Camp, Private Writes to President

Copyright by New York Times

A private at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., thinks life in Army camps is "heaven," compared to the World War camps, and he has written President Roosevelt to assure him so and to make numerous suggestions for speeding national defense. He also pleaded for sacrifices and an end of strikes in aircraft factories.

The War Department gave out the letter last night but without making public the name of the writer. The text follows:

"Dear Mr. President of the United States, Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy:

"I hope this isn't out of the way of Army regulations. I just thought I'd write to you telling how Army life is out here. Some ideas concerning it.

"If the Army told us boys in each barracks to have a separate container in each barracks to put their empty razor blades and tooth paste tubes and other steel and lead objects it would help in national defense. Put retreated tires on any trucks and cars that are being used around camp. As on maneuvers they must be pretty good.

"The system we have out here for mess can't be beat in any other army camp. It's a system that everybody likes. The food is better than I ate at home.

The Iron Ring Tightens

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Sept. 21.—The German high command opened the fourth month of the war in Russia today with a series of communiques claiming that heavy losses had been inflicted upon the four armies of Marshall Semyon Budyenny encircled east of captured Kiev and that the Crimean Peninsula had been cut off from the rest of the Soviet Union.

(Moscow yesterday admitted the evacuation of Kiev, which the Germans reported taking on Friday and there were rumors in Bern, Switzerland, that Russian collapse is imminent on the southern front.

It also was reported there that Marshal Budyenny was being replaced as commander-in-chief in the south by Col. Gen. Ivan S. Gonev, brains of the counteroffensive in the Smolensk sector, where large German forces are declared trapped in one of their own "steel-lined" pockets.)

An additional special German communique tonight said that German troops have fought their way three-quarters of the distance across the Baltic Island of Oesel and occupied its capital, Arensburg.

The most menacing of these reports for the Red army, it is considered here, is that of the fighting east and southeast of Kiev. The fringes of the "pocket" are said to have already been broken off into a number of splinters, some of which were wiped out Saturday.

Claim 150,000 Prisoners

The fragmentation is said to be especially serious directly east of Kiev, where the armies which Saturday morning occupied the Ukrainian capital are reported to have taken 150,000 troops prisoners and captured "inestimable booty," including 150 tanks and 602 cannons. The communique added: "The annihilation of the rest of the encircled enemy is in process and the announcement of further prisoners and booty may be expected."

German sources admitted "violent" attempts by the Soviet to crack the ring of German troops around them, but claimed that all these collapsed under German fire.

Operations in this sector of the front, it also was revealed, are being commanded for Germany by Field Marshal Walther von Reichenau and the panzer commanders, Col. Gens. Paul von Kleist and Guderian.

Thrust Toward Donets

While the brunt of the German force in this area is directed inward against the enclosed Red troops, nevertheless panzer columns are branching away toward the Donets Basin. One report today told of an advance guard of light panzer troops reaching as far as 25 miles in this direction Saturday.

Kiev Evacuated, Soviet Army Admits

Forces Now Fighting to Cover Kharkov; 32 Villages Reported Retaken in Center

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Monday), Sept. 22.—Abandonment of Kiev, bitterly defended capital of the Ukraine and Russia's third largest city, was acknowledged officially by the Russians today.

Known as "the mother of the Russias," this city of 846,000 population was the first major prize to fall to the Germans in three months of fighting.

Today's early morning communique, devoting one sentence to the retreat from the Ukrainian city, said only: "After many days of fierce fighting our troops evacuated Kiev."

The Germans had announced Kiev's capture last Friday through a "perfect example of blitzkrieg" embodying all the weapons in the Nazi arsenal, but as late as yesterday the Russians said a life and death struggle still was being waged there over a battlefield carpeted with Nazi dead.

Many Defenders Saved

The retreat from Kiev was carried out in accordance with the Soviet plan of yielding ground if necessary to keep the Red army intact.

The withdrawal was made necessary after the Germans crossed the Dnieper to the north, swept down the east bank and penetrated the ring of fire the Soviets had maintained about the city.

A large part of the city's defenders was believed saved by stubborn rearguard action.

The loss of Kiev was a serious one, for besides being the capital of the Ukraine, it was an important industrial city and the administrative center for the whole of southwestern Russia.

Despite this setback, the news from the central front was heartening to Russians.

Regain Ground in Center

Offsetting somewhat the loss of this important city were reports that the Red army had recaptured 32 villages and driven the Germans from a strongly fortified line in a central front counterattack, and were inflicting enormous losses upon Germans blasting at the defenders of Leningrad.

Supporting the German ground troops battering Soviet bunkers before Leningrad were German dive-bombers who were declared striking "with such ferocity it seems the earth itself will split."

The fury of the Luftwaffe assaults was emphasized by the Soviet communique which told of the destruction of 60 German planes in Saturday's fighting alone. The Russians admitted the loss of 24 of their craft that day.

Finnish Warship Sunk

In the Gulf of Finland the Soviet information bureau reported the Finnish coastal defense monitor Ilmarinen, 3900 tons, struck mines during an attack and sank.

In abandoning Kiev, Marshal Semeon Budyenny's Ukrainian armies apparently fell back to new positions to reorganize for a defense against an apparent German thrust against Kharkov, the greatest city of the rich Donets area.

As an example of the terrific losses sustained by the Germans along the entire Arctic-to-Baltic front, the Soviet communique quoted German prisoners as saying the Thirtieth German Infantry Division and antiaircraft division operating in the Leningrad area had lost nearly 50 per cent of their men.

The story was the same, the Russians said, at Kiev and Odessa and on the central front.

Dispatches to the official army newspaper Red Star failed to indicate whether the central front attack was part of the counter-offensive in the Smolensk area or was farther south in an effort to relieve pressure on Red troops about Kiev.

Nazi Division Defeated

In a stubborn and sanguinary battle, the account said, the Red army inflicted a "serious defeat" on the Thirty-fourth German Infantry Division and routed two battalions sent to reinforce it.

Soviet artillery, airplanes and tanks were credited with a perfectly coordinated action in the battle.

One tank unit was said to have driven far into the German rear ranks and destroyed a battalion and a half of Germans.

Waves of German infantry are being hurled against Leningrad's bunkers, but despite mass air and ground assaults the Germans had failed to gain an inch of ground, the Russians said. They declared that in some sectors of the Leningrad front the Russians had taken the initiative. At the southern end of the front Russians were said to be standing fast under Rumanian bayonet charges against defenses of Odessa.

Red Star estimated the Germans had lost 40 per cent of the manpower of all divisions hurled against Leningrad.

CRIMEA REPORTED CUT OFF—Berlin said yesterday that Crimea was isolated by a drive across the Dnieper at Berislav to the Sea of Azov. A German communique also claimed forces driving on Kiev from the north and west have joined east of that city was accomplished by one of these columns operating further south. The column advanced from the town of Berislav on the Dnieper River, apparently about 30 miles in a southerly direction to the coast of the sea of Azov, according to the communique.

Meanwhile, the Luftwaffe is reported to have continued to scour the Crimean supply routes at sea. The daily high command communique reported the sinking of five Soviet ships—one outsize vessel, a gunboat and three merchantmen totaling 10,000 tons—in the Gulf of Karwinitski, northwest of the peninsula.

Far from abandoning the Crimea, however, the Soviets are continuing to disembark fresh troops for its defense.

The most sensational of today's batch of communiques in the German press was, however, that of the fighting on the Baltic Island of Oesel. A late official communique said the taking of its capital, Arensburg, meant that Oesel, like the tiny Island of the Moon, which the Germans used as a stepping-stone to Oesel from the Estonian mainland, is "now fast in our hands."

The communique admitted, however, that "scattered groups of the Soviet troops of occupation are still in the western part of the island," but it added, "the destruction of these troops is imminent."

Reports of the battle for Leningrad tell of continued bombardments of the city and its defenses by the Luftwaffe. On the banks of Lake Ladoga, east of the city, it is claimed an important railway junction has been taken.

Eyewitness stories published in the German press tell of bitter fighting. To cite but one, it is said that a lone Red soldier held up a German infantry detachment for several hours. According to this story, the infantry weapons were of no avail in forcing the soldier to yield a necessary position and the Germans finally captured him by telling him that they were prisoners of the Soviet and wresting his last hand-grenade from him in a hand-to-hand scuffle.

Munitions Expert Predicts Invasion By British in 1942

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Sept. 21.—Capt. Robert W. A. Brewer, an officer of the British army who has been an American citizen since 1925 and now is a munitions expert at the plant of the American Type Founders, Inc., in Elizabeth, N. J., left La Guardia Field today for the Rock Island Arsenal in Illinois, hopeful of stimulating cooperation between British military authorities and American gun makers.

Accuracy and mobility were prime necessities in artillery, he said, and would enable the British to invade the Lowlands, probably next year, without calling on the United States for man power. American manufacturers, he said, had not fully realized the importance of great quantities of guns that were extremely accurate and extremely mobile and British military authorities were far from realizing the capabilities of American manufacturers.

Nazi Troops Set For French Revolt

French political groups can not get along together.

If German troops left Paris, the sources claimed, an immediate revolt might be expected, with Frenchmen fighting against Frenchmen and "blood running in the gutters."

Petain declared his government was seeking out the guilty "by all means at its disposal" and urged particularly that the residents of the German-occupied zone help save French unity by preserving order.

That, he asserted, was their great responsibility to their fatherland.

War Department Has Difficulties In Buying Foods

By the Associated Press

The War Department has encountered some difficulties, it admitted yesterday, in carrying out its huge canned fruit and vegetable purchasing program for the feeding of the Army through the next year.

Bids on asparagus were rejected as too high, it was reported, and purchases will be delayed until next spring's new crop comes in; canned corn offerings were "lighter than expected;" snopbean responses were "decidedly disappointing" and a new invitation will have to be issued for canned tomatoes.

"In some instances the Quartermaster Corps is having extreme difficulty in getting suppliers to bid direct to the Army," the War Department reported.

At the Chicago central purchasing depot, spotty response to two invitations for peas necessitated a third invitation, on which bids will be opened Tuesday.

anyway, which he elected to forfeit. Others admitted they knew of the regulation but "just weren't thinking," Luebkert said. He also reminded the violators that the traffic toll to date is 62 dead, most of them pedestrians.

Traffic Inspector Miller has been visiting the police precincts for the past ten days instructing the men in handling their traffic posts and urging them to pay particular attention to violations by pedestrians.

Ninety per cent of the arrests were made between the hours of 10 a. m. and 5:30 p. m. Several arrests occurred after dark.

Only four of 16 precincts and divisions of the department made such arrests. In addition to the 13 regular precincts, there are the Harbor Precinct, Women's Bureau, and the Traffic Division.

No arrests were made at Thirteenth and F Streets Northwest or Thirteenth and E Streets Northwest, or at any of the other heavily traveled downtown corners, where there are special pedestrian control lights. These corners usually are well guarded by traffic policemen.

that would cost me at least 500 dollars if I was a civilian. I can't see why some squawk about it. From what I hear fro mthe veterans of the last war this is heaven. If you try hard enough and be a good soldier in time a rating comes your way. On top the $10 raise everybody gets practically you'll be making as much as home. Forty dollars, no food to pay for or clothing or board. Heck you can't beat it. When I get released from the Army I expect to have saved at least 600 or more dollars.

"If they should strike any more in the airplane factories they should put the Army men who had technical training on the jobs and that will show the civilian that after all we must sacrifice something.

"I hope this doesn't put me in wrong with the Army officials. If it does just tear this letter and say nothing more.

"Sincerely thank you.

One of your boys."

Just to set the record straight, the War Department announced that the Army had already started to retread the tires of vehicles in order to save rubber.

British Seek to Curb Return of Children

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Sept. 21.—In an attempt to stop what was called an "alarming back to the towns" movement of Britain's evacuated children the government is taking a census of the children sent to reception areas, it was revealed today.

It was reported 75 per cent of the children from four Middlesex schools have returned home. Parents, it was stated, argued that offspring are happier and healthier at home, bliz or no blitz.

Odessa Gets Steady Stream Of Supplies

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 21.—Russian transports bearing reinforcements and supplies are slipping into besieged Odessa night after night, German war reporter Karl Sedlatzek reported today in a dispatch describing hard fighting for the Soviet Black Sea port.

Hundreds of Rumanian batteries around Odessa pour shells into the city day and night and the rumbling of their fire can be heard for miles, he wrote.

"During every attack by Rumanian troops—and how very many attacks already have been made—the attackers see the same picture of destruction wrought by the Rumanian artillery fire," the reporter went on.

"When Rumanian battalions advance in open ranks according to the French manner they run into mad fire from innumerable machine guns so that often only a strip of land torn by artillery can be reached."

The Russians by their tactics, Sedlatzek said, are sacrificing great numbers of men.

Each fallen Red army man is replaced with a new soldier, he related, so that the Rumanians "actually must snatch each inch of ground from the Soviets around Odessa in weeks-long fighting."

The reporter said the Russian defenses were built in a broad bend around the city and that only since the beginning of September have the Rumanian guns been able to fire on military positions in the city itself. "The closer the Rumanians work their way toward the city—and actually they are winning ground steadily—the greater are the masses of men the Soviets are shoving into the Odessa defense system," he asserted.

"War prisoners say each night transports with troops from Black Sea ports arrive in Odessa and further that all male inhabitants of the city, with the exception of children and the aged, are put into uniform and trained in 14-day courses."

Uruguay Building Base Reportedly With U. S. Loan

Montevideo, Sept. 21 (AP).—Uruguay, which has promised the United States the use of her seaports and other facilities in the event of war, will begin construction soon of a huge naval air base near the Atlantic Coast, informed sources reported today.

The site, it was said, would include Leguna Negra—Lakeude Los Defundos—and the strip of land separating it from the Atlantic.

Cost of the base reportedly would be paid from the $17,500,000 recently obtained for national defense from the United States, half as a gift and half as a loan.

Planes based there, it was pointed out, would command the entrance to the River Plata, trade route and possible invasion road to Uruguay, Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Bolivia.

Thousands choose TIMKEN OIL HEAT

It's patriotic to be thrifty and save fuel! And that's just what thousands of Timken Wall-Flame Oil Burner users are doing—saving from 20% to 40% on fuel and electric costs over their previous cost of heating with ordinary pressure or gun type burners. While these Timken users are saving money by using less fuel, they're also doing their part toward relieving the transportation situation. And of course they are enjoying clean, convenient, automatic Timken Oil Heat.

SAVE FUEL FOR DEFENSE

SAVE MONEY FOR YOURSELF

Now, for the first time, Timken Dealers are making their long experience in oil heating economy available to all oil burner users. They will make a scientific efficiency test of your burner, regardless of its type or make, and if it is wasting oil, tell you just what is necessary to restore it to normal efficiency. Or if your burner is not wasting oil, you will receive a Fuel Conservation Certificate and window sticker to show that you are cooperating. Right now is the time to have your burner tested and put in condition. If it is beyond repair, or if you now are planning to buy a new burner—get all the facts on Timken Wall-Flame Burner economy! R.A.F. Pounds Nazis In France All Day

R. A. F. Ace Says:

Nazi Fighters Are Greeted By 'Tally Ho!'

By Wing Comdr. A. G. Malan

Famous R. A. F. fighter pilot who has shot down 35 planes.

(Distributed by INS by special permission of "London Calling," official organ of the BBC.)

London, Sept. 21 (INS).—You have no doubt heard of enemy fighters being blown up in the air by cannon fire. This is no exaggeration, as I have experienced three similar incidents myself.

Only the other day I was crossing the French coast, just south of Boulogne, when the ground defenses fired a series of red ack-ack puffs in our vicinity. This we knew to be a signal to their fighters, so I continued on course for St. Omer for one minute and then did a quick turn with one of my squadrons toward Boulogne.

Pieces Hit His Plane

We sighted about 20 Nazi Messerschmitt 109s of the new F type flying in a large V formation in pairs. We dived in behind them and I singled out the right-hand flank man and closed to 50 yards before I opened up with my cannon.

His machine literally exploded in the air and large pieces from his aircraft damaged both my wings as I narrowly missed his fuselage. One piece wrapped itself around my pitot tube, which is under the port wing, and, when I landed, it was still attached.

All this naturally took only a few seconds and, with my overtaking speed, I closed in on another 109, which was doing a right-hand climb into the sun.

During my turn I saw two more Messerschmitts spinning down in flames and I knew the rest of the boys were doing their stuff. I closed to within 50 yards of the second machine and gave him a short burst of cannon fire.

Again I was lucky, for most of his tail came off. In fact, the No. 3 in my formation said afterward that the fin with the swastika on narrowly missed his cockpit as it went hurtling through the air.

Wings Tear Away

Unfortunately I did not see this because this tail was behind the nose of my machine at the time. He went down in a steep dive at terrific speed and I followed behind—not realizing I was wasting the rest of my ammunition on a "dead" machine.

I broke off at 5000 feet, having used up all my ammunition, and saw the wings tear away from the fuselage, which plunged into the earth with a terrific explosion. I did a quick turn off Le Touquet at low level and could see the rest of the Spitfires circling Boulogne, with not a Hun to be seen in the sky.

I know that we have got old Jerry rattled quite a lot with these offensive operations. Every time he pops his nose up in the area in which our bombers are operating there is a whoop of delight, and Spitfires shoulder each other out of the way to knock him on the head. In about 30 seconds the scene is transformed into Messerschmitts screaming down towards the ground with Spitfires on their tails pumping lead into them as fast as they can, and then there is the usual little circle of disappointed British pilots patrolling the areas where the Huns had been, and cursing their luck for not being in the right place at the right time.

"Tally Ho!"

A few days ago we saw three formations of Messerschmitts approaching us. They were in widely spread V formation and looked most formidable as they made tiny silhouettes against the white top of the clouds. Someone called out over his radio: "Tally ho! Ten o'clock! Surely they must be friendly?" And then someone else said: "By heaven, they're Huns! Come on and cut yourself a slice of cake." That is the spirit among our pilots on these offensives nowadays. That morning we peeled off down on them and beat them up, destroying at least three before the rest escaped into cloud.

When fighter pilots go over there these days they don't simply go to escort the bombers; they go looking for trouble as well. The leaders of the squadrons which form the wing I lead are tremendously enthusiastic and they cannot help passing on their enthusiasm to their own pilots. One squadron leader, a Scot from Edinburgh, has shot down eight Me. 109s since fighter command began its latest offensive.

Mark Anniversary Of 1940 Smashing Of Invasion Plans

By the Associated Press

Folkestone, England, Sept. 21.—Racing eastward, wave after wave, in formations as large as any the R. A. F. has launched in its daylight challenge to the Luftwaffe, the British bombed their way across northern France and back again today.

Observers who watched the roaring armada fan out toward Cape Gris Nez expressed belief the attack might equal the widespread raids of last Saturday, which the air ministry termed the busiest day since the reinforced R. A. F. began hitting back.

The attack was timed for the anniversary of the day a year ago when outnumbered fledglings of the British flying force carried their first mass offensive deep into Germany and along the Nazi-held coast from the Baltic to Boulogne in trip-hammer blows at what were regarded as German preparations for invasion.

Meet Stiff Resistance

The attackers fought their way through German aerial resistance. Nineteen German planes were said to have been shot down in the widespread forays over the Continent. The British reported losing 12 planes, all fighters. (The Germans reported 20 Spitfires downed in a 40-minute battle today over the English Channel.)

The full scope of the assault was not disclosed immediately, but it was reported that bombs were seen to strike a power station at Gosnay, northern France, starting large fires.

Other forces apparently concentrated on the Boulogne area.

Churchgoers observed the anniversary with prayers for the R. A. F., and the fliers themselves, before taking off for the attack, participated in parades of commemoration at all air stations.

Bag 57 Nazis in Week

An official statement said the R. A. F. destroyed 57 German planes last week—54 over the continent and three over Britain—and lost 46 planes, 14 of them bombers.

(A British radio report heard by CBS said British antiaircraft guns and defense patrols had destroyed more than 1,000 German planes from January 1 to September 1 with a loss of 300 British planes.)

Luftwaffe Hits Back

Stung into action by the R. A. F. assaults, the Germans dive-bombed a southeast coast town tonight and roared over the Thames Estuary.

One bomb fell on a vicarage in the southeast coast town but the Vicar and his wife, who had just returned from church, scrambled unhurt from the wreckage.

Berlin, Sept. 21 (AP).—The German air force turned fiercely on Britain again last night with attacks against Southampton and airports and harbor facilities of southern and eastern England.

A communique said strong forces dropped their heaviest bombs on the Southampton Harbor facilities and supply system. Hits were reported scored on warehouses, docks and military objectives and many fires were started.

Formations attacking other island areas were said to have sunk one 4,000-ton freighter and damaged another.

A large group of R. A. F. bombers yesterday sought to attack a German convoy off the Dutch coast, D. N. B. said, and German naval artillery shot down three of the attackers. The news agency did not say what happened to the convoy.

The R. A. F. lashed back with raids over a wide area of northern and southwestern Germany. Some of the planes came as far as Berlin, routing inhabitants out of their beds. The communique said their bombers caused "insignificant damage" and reported three British bombers shot down by night chasers and anti-aircraft guns.

Canada Building Joint-Use Air Bases in Wilds

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (AP).—Construction of fighter plane ferry stations in the wildernesses of the Canadian Northwest for the joint use of the United States and Canada against any Pacific Coast attack was disclosed today by Air Vice Marshal C. O. Johnson, deputy chief of the Canadian air staff.

Johnson said in an address prepared for broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that work was being rushed on building and equipping the airdromes and was now well along.

"By reason of close cooperation with the United States for defense of this hemisphere against attack, steps are in progress for joint action in the event of an attack on Alaska or the Pacific Coast," he said.

"A chain of what we call staging airdromes are now under construction in the Northwest, so that fighter squadrons from both the United States and from Canadian bases may be moved to northern British Columbia or to Alaska from the center of the continent without delay."

Japanese Attack In South China

Hongkong, Sept. 21 (AP).—Japanese forces, pushing from four bases northeast of Canton, on the south China coast, were reported today to be seeking encirclement of thousands of Chinese troops in the East River Valley.

Dispatches said extensive surprise operations had begun three days ago.

British Experts See Volga Next Defense Line

By the United Press

London, Sept. 21.—British military experts, analyzing reports of German successes in the Ukraine, said tonight that Russia's next great natural defense line in the south was the Volga River and that Marshal Semyon Budyenny probably would fight only delaying actions ahead of it.

They added the precaution that such seemed the case unless Budyenny had vastly greater reserves in men and weapons than anyone here suspects. But their attitude clearly was pessimistic.

Standing on the edge of the Donets Basin with the Don and Caspian beyond, the experts said the Germans were entitled to expect that within a fortnight or so they would be able to drive a wedge through to the Caspian, cutting off Batum and Baku and depriving Russia of another great chunk of industry.

Observers said the Don and Donets Rivers might hold up the Germans to some extent, but probably only as temporary stumbling blocks.

Doubt prevailed in competent quarters here that the Germans would be able before the heavy snows to force the high passes of the Caucasus, taking Batum and Baku by land.

Russian naval might in the south was understood to be virtually unimpaired in striking power, making a seaborne attack on trans-Caucasia highly risky. A drive through Turkey would be a long job at best, because the invaders would be forced to cover 1,000 miles or so of primitive country.

Thus, the analysts said, as things stand at the moment Batum and Baku seem reasonably safe for the winter. But the trans-Caucasian fields produce more than 75 per cent of Russia's oil, and the cutting of land communications would leave only the water route across the Caspian and up the Volga to deliver fuel for Soviet tanks, tractors and planes.

Whether the Germans were in sight of another great objective, the destruction of the Red army, was unclear on the basis of available information. The Russians may have succeeded in retiring in good order and inflicting such heavy losses on the German war machine that the possibility of exhaustion on the Nazi side still was a big element in the whole picture.

Aviator Killed Ferrying Bomber

Lubbock, Tex., Sept. 21 (INS).—Lieut. Shelby Harper of Will Rogers Feld, Oklahoma City, was killed late today when a twin-engined Douglas bomber crashed a quarter of a mile from Lubbock Municipal Airport.

Lieut. Harper, formerly of Lubbock, was ferrying the bomber from Long Beach, Calif., to New York City for eventual overseas service with the Canadian Army. It was his eighth ferrying trip.

A crowd of 500 persons, including the victim's parents, saw the accident.

60 Red Sailors Reach Sweden, Believed Survivors of Battle

Stockholm, Sept. 21 (INS).—Sixty sailors of Russia's Baltic fleet were picked up by Swedish warships today as they rowed into Swedish territorial waters. They were immediately interned.

It was believed they were survivors of a naval battle connected with the German attacks on the Soviet islands of Oesel and Dagoe. They had rowed all the way across the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia to reach Swedish coastal waters.

(Berlin has announced the capture of Oesel and the nearby island of Wormsi.)

'No Benzina, No Flying'

With the R. A. F. in Egypt's Western Desert, Sept. 20—(Delayed) (AP).—R. A. F. attacks on Axis gasoline supplies in Libya are believed by British airmen to explain the forced landings of a number of Italian-manned Stukas on the Libyan frontier in recent days.

One squadron of Junkers-87 dive-bombers dropped like flies over a wide area of the desert. Their Italian crews admitted they had taken off for a raid over Sidi Barrani, Egypt, with their tanks only half filled.

Sixteen of the captured Italians shrugged their shoulders. 'No benzina, no flying," they said.

Maisky Appeals for Tanks

London (Monday), Sept. 22 (AP).—Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador to Great Britain, appealed today for "more and more tanks" at the opening of a week in which the entire British tank output goes to Russia.

"The sooner you send us tanks and the greater their number the earlier the Nazi hordes will be defeated."

Marshal's Son a Captive?

London, Sept. 21 (INS).—The British news agency, Reuters, today quoted the Rome radio as reporting Marshal Klementi Voroshilov's son had been captured by the Germans in the fighting around Leningrad. Two months ago the Germans themselves claimed they had captured a son of Premier Josef Stalin.

Internment Camp Riot

London, Sept. 21. (AP).—Six hundred alleged Fascist and Nazi sympathizers interned at Peel on the Isle of Man attacked their guards last night after authorities refused to return three of their number captured in an attempt to escape by boat.

British Press Association reported the guards were pelted with stones and bottles. The guards were said to have withheld fire because no attempt was made to break out of the camp's barbed wire barriers.

E-Boat Attack Beaten Off

London, Sept. 21 (AP).—Two of Germany's fast little torpedo craft—which the British call "E" (for 'enemy") boats were severely damaged last night, the admiralty reported, and others beaten off after they attacked North Sea convoys.

Foster Calls Nazi Drive East 'March To Waterloo'

"When the history of the war is written, the day that Hitler's armies crossed the Russian frontier will be registered as the day that Hitler started to march to his Waterloo," William Z. Foster, national chairman of the American Communist Party, declared last night.

Speaking at a memorial meeting held by the local Communist organization in the National Press Auditorium for Sidney Shosteck, Washington labor leader killed during the Spanish civil war, Foster condemned both isolationist leaders, whom he termed Hitler's advance agents, and those who advocated letting the Red army "do our fighting for us."

Other speakers at the meeting, attended by about 300 persons, were Robert Raven, Abraham Lincoln Brigade veteran, who was blinded in action, and Ben Davis, leading Negro Communist and associate editor of the Daily Worker.

Nazi-Bulgar Moves Believed Aimed at Turks

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 21.—Qualified London observers, studying Bulgaria's declaration yesterday of a state of emergency, termed it flatly tonight a forerunner of a new German diplomatic offensive against Turkey with attack on the Dardanelles to follow shortly if persuasion fails.

Control over the whole Turkish-held gateway from the Mediterranean into the Black Sea—the Dardanelles, Sea of Marmara and Bosporus—was seen as necessary to Adolf Hitler's plan of dominating the Black Sea area, these sources said.

Accompanying or subsequent steps, they said, would necessarily be conquest of Odessa and Sevastopol and destruction of Russia's Black Sea fleet.

To Clear Way to Oil

Behind these immediate objectives, it was said, is Hitler's major goal—the rich Caucasian oil fields.

Some quarters said that the Germans intended to capitalize on the general antipathy of the Bulgars toward the Turks.

The Germans and King Boris of Bulgaria, it was explained, already have found that a large proportion of the Bulgarians are pro-Russian and as a result it has been necessary, according to reports here, to herd thousands of them into concentration camps to prevent open anti-Nazi outbreaks.

Meanwhile, there were thinly veiled, unofficial warnings to Turkey that Britain and her allies (Turkey herself is a nonbelligerent ally) would be able to give little aid if the Germans and Bulgars struck suddenly unless the Turks opened their frontiers to admit helping armies now.

The Sunday Observer's diplomatic correspondent wrote:

"It is known, and is even obvious, that the Bulgar-German plan stops short at the Straits. There is no likelihood of an attempted land drive at the Caucasus through the difficult country of Anatolia (that is, Turkey in Asia Minor).

Will Strike by Sea

"The German plan is for an attack by sea from Crimean, Bulgarian and Turkish bases.

"Concentration of allied forces on the Syrian, Iraqi and Iranian frontiers of Turkey is therefore of little importance unless the Turkish government in time invites allied help so that those forces can be transported to the Thracian (European) frontier, where the issue obviously will be decided."

Britain has been neglecting no opportunity to tell the Turks that their turn is coming some day in Germany's one-by-one system of conquests.

But there is some dissent from the general belief that Bulgarian moves betoken impending invasion of Turkey.

One observer declared that Hitler might easily be feeding such reports in order to spread disquiet in the Middle East and cause Britain to concentrate forces near Turkey, thus forestalling the threat of a British offensive against Axis-held Libya in North Africa this fall.

6000 Expected at 'Pop' Concert Tonight

More than 6000 persons are expected tonight when the National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Hans Kindler opens its first series of "Pop" concerts in Riverside Stadium, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest at 8:30 p. m.

The advance sale has been exceptionally heavy, according to Edward R. Norris, manager of the Symphony box office, where tickets are on sale. It is expected that the entire house will be sold out by concert time.

"Guns for Soldiers" Articles Reprinted in Booklet

"MOST important newspaper articles to be published this year!" That's what many people, including high Government officials, said of the "Guns for Soldiers" articles which appeared on the front page of The Washington Post daily from August 20 through September 8.

These articles, by members of The Post's own staff, explored every phase of national defense to discover the true situation, to lay bare faults and weaknesses, to point out the need for action.

So many people have asked for copies of these articles that The Post has had the entire series reprinted in an 84-page booklet, which may be had for the nominal price of 10c. Since the supply is limited, please write now if you want one of these booklets.

Son Reported Willing to Try Ousted Shah

By Ray Brock
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 21.—Reports to foreign diplomatic circles at Ankara today seemed to confirm rumors abroad that the new Shah of Iran has agreed to sign an order for the arrest of the former Riza Shah Pahlevi, his father, as a part of the son's desperate, but probably vain, attempt to retain his throne. The new Shah has issued a series of sweeping decrees designed to wipe out the corruption of his father's reign.

The new Shah pledged close cooperation with Great Britain and Russia, and called for constitutional reform, the end of despotism and introduction of habeas corpus procedure—unheard of in Iran for 16 years.

Government leaders proposed, it is reported, that the former Riza Shah Pahlevi should be taken from Isfahan and returned to Teheran for trial upon charges still unidentified, but reported to include the violation of almost every charge in the ignored Iranian constitution of 1925.

Crown Jewels Gone

The Parliament, in secret session on Wednesday, discussed the subject of Iran's crown jewels—still believed to have been smuggled out of the vaults of the Mellie Bank—the return of private property to rightful owners, public security, reformation of the regime's finance policy, reduction of the budget and taxation, cancellation of the law abolishing religious endowments, and liberation of innocent political prisoners.

The young Shah's declaration of Saturday was drafted after consultation with Sir Reader Bullard, the British minister, who had for a long time advised the British government of worsening social, political and economic conditions in Iran, the almost incredible secret police system of the former Shah and the tyrannous manner which the former ruler imprisoned or executed his enemies, seized their personal properties and territories — including three entire provinces—and conducted his administration generally upon medieval lines.

Reports from Iran seem to confirm previous reports to the effect that the Iranian tribal risings have not been quelled or dissipated. It is suspected here that members of the Lur and Bakhtiari tribes—probably assisted by Kurds, who have no strong racial affinity with other Iranians, are trying to ferret out the former Shah from the royal capital at Isfahan.

Want His Blood

The expected government order for his arrest may thus be intended to preserve the former monarch from the wrath of his people and insure a fair trial. There is an enormous vendetta among Iranian tribesmen who have sworn to assassinate the former Shah before he can escape abroad to enjoy the fruits of his vast fortune, reported banked in London, New York and San Francisco. Reports from Iran today said that the Shah's personal deposits are much less than heretofore believed—about 20 million dollars in London, another 20 or 25 million in New York or elsewhere.

The eventual refuge of former Riza Shah Pahlevi is now known to have been Bombay, where he had hoped to secure refuge for the duration of the war. It appears that unless the former monarch can make good his escape from Isfahan—an enorcously difficult venture across the trackless wastes of southern Iran, infested with angry tribesmen—he probably will be returned under heavy guard to Teheran for trial.

While Mohammed Riza, the new Shah, is making frantic efforts to appease his critics and enemies, his substitution for his father appears to be unlikely to succeed. Reports were again current in Iranian circles here tonight of a return of the old Iranian Kajar dynasty, probably in October, the month that Riza Pahlevi was made Shah 16 years ago.

Turkish Consul In N. Y. Strangles Self by His Hands

New York Sept. 21 (U.P.).—Ali Mehmet Yukselen, Turkish consul-general in New York today strangled himself with his own hands, apparently because of a heart ailment and despondency over the "European situation," police announced. He left a short note requiring a "simple" burial.

Mrs. Yukselen and a servant, Stephen Vitler, found the body lying across a bed with a necktie drawn closely around the throat, Yukselen's hands still clutching the ends.

Yukselen had tied a slip noose in the neckpiece, circled his neck with it a second time, crossed his hands and grasped both ends and tugged on the ends, strangling himself.

Fish Blames 'Phoney War' On Roosevelt

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., (Republican), of New York, last night charged President Roosevelt with "trying to build up a phoney, false and fraudulent war issue by attempting to make out that we are responsible for the safety of ships flying the Panamian flag."

He was one of four speakers on the American Forum of the Air over a national network, discussing the President's "Shoot on Sight" speech. Other speakers were James H. R. Cromwell, former United States Minister to Canada; Dr. William Y. Elliott, former chairman of the department of government at Harvard University, and now an OPM official; and Amos Pinchot, member of the board of the America First Committee.

"I further accuse President Roosevelt of having sent American merchant ships into the war zone in the Red Sea, 10,000 miles away, and contrary to the spirit of the neutrality law," Representative Fish stated.

Waiting for An Attack

Then the Republican Representative declared that "if an American ship, flying an American flag is attacked in neutral waters, I will want to go into a shooting war tomorrow."

Elliott challenged the speaker as to what were "neutral waters. Who is to decide what is and what isn't a war zone?" he asked the Congressman. It looks to me if this is a debate between Mr. Fish and Mr. Fish," he countered.

"Congressman Fish still harps on the Neutrality Act. I hoped that he might be decently ashamed of the delusion which he has tried for years to foist on the American people," Elliott continued, "that by tying our own hands we could prevent war and escape all the consequences of a world turned against us. Hitler knows that we have chosen sides, if Congressman Fish does not."

Amos Pinchot asserted that "if the President or anybody else, claims that under the doctrine of freedom of seas, our Government is entitled to send ships loaded with munitions through Europe's war zones to a belligerent power, and further claims that these ships are entitled to immunity from attack, he is making a claim that is unsupported by justice, law or custom.

The "Do-Nothing" School

James Cromwell told the radio audience that "both of my old friends here, Mr. Fish and Mr. Pinchot belong to the "do-nothing" school. They think peace and safety are to be found through inaction. They would have you believe that we can ignore freedom of the seas, slam the door of an isolated cyclone cellar and emerge strong and unscathed when the storm is over.'

of the Jewish new year, I desire to extend my cordial greetings to Americans of the Jewish faith. I fervently hope that the blessings of providence may bring cheer during the coming twelvemonth to this esteemed and loyal group of our fellow citizens."

Rabbi Wise warned that the world must not become weary of hearing of the plight of the Jews, adding that while only six million of 150 million persons captive to Adolf Hitler are Jews, their suffering must be of concern to the whole world because:

"Hitler has sought the destruction of the world not merely as an end in itself, but as a means of creating division, confusion and internal strife within the ranks of men and women who would otherwise stand united and strong against his assault."

Like Smokescreen

Dr. Wise expressed hope that in the new year "our Christian neighbors" would recognize "that the assault upon the Jews or any other racial group represents a smokescreen for a much more concerted attack upon all of the institutions of democracy and freedom."

Imposition of recent restriction upon their racial brethren abroad saddened the usual gay holiday festivities in New York, where live more Jews than dwell in the Palestine homeland.

Army chaplains arranged special services for Jewish soldiers. Many at camps and naval bases near here were granted leave to return home.

The Jewish holy season will be climaxed by Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, October 1 and 2.

Stalin Wooed By Anglo-U. S. Stand, Nye Says

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 21.—Noting that the Roosevelt-Churchill war aims declaration made no specific declaration for freedom of religion, Sen. Gerald P. Nye declared today the conferees "were after the good will of Joe Stalin."

Addressing an America First Committee rally, Nye said the President later sent a message to Congress saying that, of course, freedom of religion was understood to be included. The North Dakota isolationist added that it was well known that Stalin hated religion, and continued:

"President Roosevelt and Churchill were after the good will of Joe Stalin."

Nye termed Britain the "most aggresive aggressor" in history, claimed that nation expended $136,000,000 for propaganda purposes in the United States in 1914-17 and said he had an idea England was spending "something" now.

150-Billion Debt Seen

St. Louis, Sept. 21 (AP).—Asserting that the Nation was heading toward bankruptcy, Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat), Missouri, predicted today a national debt of $150,000,000,000 by the end of the next fiscal year if defense and lease-land spending continues to be increased at the current rate.

Clark, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, said Congress "will have to raise $4,000,000,000 annually forever to pay the interest alone on the national deficit.

He predicted the tax bill passed recently would be superseded by another "within a year."

Clark, who is home for a few days' rest, said in an interview that $13,000,000,000 had been appropriated by lease-lend in the last six months and that most persons do not realize how much it is.

"If they realized that it means roughly $100 per head for every man, woman and child in the United States, they could see where the country is heading," he added.

Nazis Discussing Attack on Them, Turks Report

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 20 (Delayed) (AP).—The question of whether Turkey will be permitted to pursue her neutral course was declared today to be under discussion in Berlin. A decision is expected in a few days.

Informants said the conference is to determine whether Germany's right flank in southeastern Europe is adequately protected by the present forces in Bulgaria or whether Turkey will be asked to give more definite guarantees.

Franz von Papen, Berlin's envoy to Turkey, was described as insisting that Turkey never would permit aggressive action across her territory, and for that reason Germany's southern flank was secure.

But Nazi army circles were said to be insiting that Turkey permit German forces to establish themselves along the Turkish coast of the Black Sea.

If the German army reaches the Caucasus, it dare not swing southward toward Iran, some thought, until two million uncommitted Turkish soldiers have been immobilized.

Roosevelt Seeks to Speed Aid

mination to resist any effort to write into the lend-lease measure a prohibition against using any of the funds for helping the Soviets, which is not provided in the Adminitsration's estimates, remained clear.

While such a proposal is reported to have been discussed by members of the Senate nonintervention group, none has openly advocated inserting a restrictive amendment to htat end in the new lend-lease legislation. Members are said to take the stand that it will be a long time before the measure reaches the Senate, giving ample opportunity to reach a decision.

Effect on Morale Feared

Administration forces are eager to avoid any likelihood of such a fight developing, out of fear of the effect on Russian morale.

President Roosevelt said recently that there was no present need to make lend-lease funds available to the Soviets because they had resources upon which to draw for cash payments. In furtherance of this policy, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has earmarked 100 million dollars for the purchase of metals from Russia and the Treasury has advanced a ten-million-dollar credit to pay for gold now being shipped to this country.

Both of these operations have given the Soviets funds for the purchase of war supplies here but Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said he thought Congress ought to keep in mind that if Russian resistance to Germany continues the time might come when Moscow would have to have credit for bombers, tanks and other equipment.

Beyond that, he said, any restriction against the use of lease-lend funds to help Russia could only be interpreted as a repudiation of the Administration's determination to give full aid to nations fighting the Nazis.

Sen. James E. Murray (Democrat), of Montana, told the United Press that "it would be criminal for the United States to withhold extending the greatest possible aid to Russia."

"Russia has performed the greatest service for the protection of democracy yet performed in this war," Murray said. "It would be absurd to keep Russia from benefiting from lend-lease funds. The effort to develop sentiment against Russia sounds suspicious, instigated by Germany itself."

Murray predicted that "the opposition will resort to every obstruction possible" to bar Russia from lend-lease aid, "but I don't think they'll be successful."

The price-control problem again will be before the House Banking and Currency Committee today, with Leon Henderson, price administrator, testifying. Chairman Steagall said that Henderson would be followed by Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve System, and, "no doubt," others.

Completion of the hearings in another two weeks was indicated, with the committee then going to work on drafting its bill.

Felon 'Haunted' 7 Years, Kills Self

Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 21 (AP).—Harold Malmberg, 27, convicted murderer whose conscience tortured him for seven years with the vision of the man he had slain, died today in the Nebraska Penitentiary hospital from what Warden Neil Olson said was self-administered poison.

The warden said Malmberg could not shake off the belief that the spirit of the man he murdered "came back every night to sit on his bed and talk to him."

Malmberg admitted murdering Russell Goodwin, a salesman who had given him a ride in 1934 when he was hitchhiking. He pleaded insanity.

The warden declared Malmberg never spent a peaceful night during his seven years of confinement, although he "was a model prisoner" who never complained and did not seek parole.

Bombers to Blast Old Tanks Today

4000 to See Planes Smash Old Weapons In Louisiana

By the Associated Press

Shreveport, La., Sept. 21.—About 100 old World War tanks and armored cars will end their careers here tomorrow in a blaze of bombing, familiar to much of Europe, but never before seen in the United States.

Tonight the old vehicles were parked all over the bombing range of Barksdale Field awaiting 30 tons of bombs to be dumped on them by 85 planes in target practice, which will be witnessed by 4000 picked officers of the Second and Third Armies, now on maneuvers in Louisiana.

After the majestic bombers, including Navy dive bombers and a squadron of the new A-20-A's sweep across to unload 460 bombs, swift pursuit planes will follow with mass machine gunnery attacks on targets representing columns of infantry. Then paratroops, armed to the teeth, will drop onto the blasted field in simulation of occupation of a completely bombed enemy battlefield.

The targets are covered with white cloth to enable the audience of Army officers to see them as they are blasted. Shrevepoters will hear bombing much as it would sound in actual warfare.

Planes Evacuated

In Threat of Hurricane

Lake Charles, La., Sept. 21 (INS)—Because of the danger of a hurricane, the Third Air Task Force headquarters tonight ordered evacuation of all planes under its command in this area.

Fast pursuit planes at New Orleans were the first to leave, taking off for Kelly and Randolph Fields. Planes at Lake Charles followed. Large numbers of planes were in the area for the big war game maneuvers which have now paused before entering their second phase.

Weather indications were that a hurricane may hit this area some time tomorrow.

500,000 Soldiers Get Needed Rest

With the Second Army in Louisiana, Sept. 21 (U.P.).—The 500,000 soldiers of the Second and Third Armies today had their first day of complete rest since the mass maneuvers started. The next phase of the maneuvers will not begin until one minute after midnight Wednesday, but the soldiers have been moving into new positions, taking a shaking from lumbering transport trucks, and setting up tents and defenses.

The next phase of the maneuvers will be the defense of Shreveport by the Second Army, which probably will be a test of armored units' ability to break up the mass attack of a superior invading army.

Headquarters Set Up

The Second Army's headquarters have been established in Shreveport ready for the battle. A reliable source said that the Blue, or Third, Army probably would be given the Second Armored Division and the headquarters unit of the First Armored Corps which heretofore have been assigned to the Second Army. However, the Blue Army is expected to relinquish its four general headquarters tank battalions to the Red Army.

Such an exchange of troops would leave the Second Army with only a slight tank superiority, and with much fewer men than it had when it met such disastrous results in its own attempted invasion in the first phase of the maneuvers.

A high official revealed that the critique of the first phase of the maneuver which will be given Tuesday will praise the cooperation of air and ground forces "beyond fondest expectations." Where only two or three air attack missions against the tank invasion were expected by the high command, the Blue Air Force carried out seven and eight such missions a day.

Unless there is a further exchange of men and equipment the Red Army will have 185 more tanks, but approximately 220,000 less men. Some sources believed Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear would be assigned additional infantry to even the opposing forces.

The Blue Army has been doing more work during its supposed rest between maneuvers than it did during the actual fighting. More than 25,000 tons of material, constituting a 12-day supply for the two maneuver armies and more than a quarter of a million gallons of gasoline are being moved to the new battle lines, which will extend roughly from Monroe through Colfax and Leesville in Louisiana to Jasper, Tex.

A group of Chicago alumnae will make the trip to honor Miss Claire, who also will be heard weekly over WGN

All for Defense

Farmers Lose Chicks, Crops But It's O.K.

By James Marlow
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lake Charles, La., Sept. 21.—Officers who settle claims for damage done in the Louisiana war maneuvers, today praised the patriotism of farmers making cash sacrifices for their Government.

One of the Third Army officers commenting on the farmers who have permitted the Government without cost to use 16,000,000 acres of their land for the war games involving 500,000 troops, said:

"Considering the size of the area, we have received comparatively few claims. The majority of them were for destruction of pine trees and large plantings by tanks and trucks.

"None of the claims have been exorbitant and in many cases the farmers and landowners, after making their claims, say 'forget it. I may have $10 or $15 due me, but I'd rather let the Government keep the money. It's all part of national defense.'"

Loses 100 Chickens

One farmer who had 160 chickens just before one unit moved onto his property, the officer said, made no claim on the Government but contented himself with this memorandum:

"I had 160 chickens and now I have 60. I am not asking payment for the 100 that disappeared but only protection for the 60 that remain."

When troops eat their way through a watermelon patch or an orchard, the claim may be filed with the Government by an irate farmer but it is sent right back to the company unit and the soldiers responsible for the free meal have to pay for it themselves.

Bugs Gone, Too

One well-satisfied farmer through whose land the Army passed, wrote:

"I wish to thank you and your men for clearing my land of grass and weeds (and probably red bugs). It looks much nicer and cleaner now than when you first occupied it."

The soldiers have complained about bites from red bugs in Louisiana and the officers said: "The soldiers probably took the red bugs with them."

Former Georgetown University President Praises Guild for 'Taking Church to the People'

The Rev. Coleman Nevils, S. J., former Georgetown University president, yesterday praised the Catholic Evidence Guild movement for "taking the church to the people."

The priest addressed a Communion breakfast at Catholic University following solemn High Mass in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception for delegates to the tenth annual National Catholic Evidence Conference. The Most Rev. Michael J. Keyes, S. M., D. D., Titular Bishop of Areopolis and former Bishop of Savannah, was Mass celebrant.

"We should make this church we take to the people attractive in its architecture," said Father Nevils by way of advice on how to improve park meetings, "and it should be inviting, and even, if possible, alluring."

James V. Hayes, of Washington, D. C., was toastmaster.

In business sessions lates in the day, three directors were named. They were W. Paul Dearing, Buffalo, N. Y.; Joseph M. Sullivan, Waterbury, Conn., and Sheldon Hanneman, New Orleans. Dearing was reelected. The two-year term of National President Harry J. Kirk, of 1404 Otis Street Northeast, this city, will expire next year.

Earlier in the afternoon, the delegates met in the Music Building to discuss problems of street speaking, and last night wound up their two-day parley with a meeting in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K Streets Northwest. Edward J. Heffron, of the National Council of Catholic Men, presided at the latter.

Pardon Our Confusion About Those 'Permeers'

Notable Local Bookings Will Not Collide; Cheers for Lindbergh Deleted From Script; Picking Up a Few Paragraphs of Loose Ends

WE APOLOGIZE to Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, and Al Selig, RKO-Radio's peregrinating publicist, for having cast a bit of a chill over "Dutch" Leonard's 1-to-0 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics out at the ballyard Saturday.

MARTHA SCOTT

Having come into possession of a completely cockeyed inkle out of the nowhere, we popped off with the depressing suggestion that when they broke out "The Little Foxes," starring Bette Davis in the Tallulah Bankhead role, on Wednesday night, for the first time anywhere since its four-week run at the Radio City Music Hall, in New York, they would be in competition with the world premiere of the Warner Brothers' "One Foot in Heaven"—if that's where the Warners have a foot—at the Earle. It must have been those Northern Lights! Mr. Meakin and Mr. Selig will have Wednesday night all to themselves.

And the Earle still will have the world premiere of "One Foot in Heaven." But it will be on Thursday night, October 2. Considerable hoop-de-doo, no doubt, and at the regular scale of prices. Regular continuous performances of this widely acclaimed subject, costarring Fredric March and Martha Scott, will begin Friday morning, October 3.

"One Foot in Heaven," as the initiate of the gelatins must know by now, is a picturization of Hartzell Spence's best-selling novel, based on the life of his father, William Spence, a Canadian medical student who embraced the ministry and served for many years as a clergyman in Midwestern communities. Bishop James Edward Freeman, of Washington—and may his recovery be speedy and complete—was head of a committee of prominent churchmen appointed by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, to select a technical advisor for the film. The committee selected Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York, for the advisory post. Dr. Peale, an ardent admirer of the novel, after his tour of duty on the West Coast, became also an ardent admirer of Hollywood. Having seen the picture at a Coast preview, Dr. Peale hailed it as "One of the greatest pictures of this or any other year. There is nothing soft about it and it will have universal appeal."

Clipping the Eagle's Wings

Charles A. Lindbergh is not so popular in Washington at the moment as he was back there in 1927 after he had flown the Spirit of St. Luftwaffe across the Atlantic. The Washington Civic Theater, which will open its 1941-42 season on October 15 with "The American Way," by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, is deleting what might be termed a "Lindbergh admiration scene" from the play. Director Leon Askin believes Lindbergh's America First activities, with special emphasis on the recent Des Moines speech, rule the once-aviator out of any consideration as a National hero. Hence he wired Kaufman for permission to make changes in the now dated eulogy. The answer was, "If it makes sense, go right ahead." Leon says it makes sense.

Sibyl Bowan, the other of the theater's foremost impressionistes, postcards from Schenectady that she is still up and about the better palaces of "escape." Having just played Boston, Albany and Schenectady, she now is cavorting on the stage at the Earle, in Philadelphia, with the Stanley, in Pittsburgh, and then the Loew time to follow. Just thought Sheila Barrett, currently Defense-Bonding at Loew's Capitol and high-jinksing at the Variety Club's weekly soiree tonight, would like to know.

Hams Across the Sea!

"I have been holding back for months," writes G. A. Conway, of Bethesda, Md., "hoping there might be some relief from the very sad situation about which I am about to enter a rave. Will some one please tell me why the residents of nearby Bethesda are inflicted with foreign-made pictures so consistently? . . . There is no theater in Bethesda where a normal American citizen can spend a normal American evening of entertainment seeing a good American film, except in between times, occasionally, apparently while the inferior foreign ones are en route." The writer then pays high tribute to the American cinema as the best in the world—which it is.

Our only solution would be that the boxoffice indicates a strong Bethesdan enthusiasm over the British thrillers that have been running there. Theater managements do not bend their energies toward presenting pictures their patrons do not want.

Pick a number from 1 to 1,000,000—preferably the latter—and get ready to multiply. Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma," opening in the National tonight, would be important under any circumstances. To arrive at its real importance, with Katharine Cornell starred, multiply by the number you chose, preferably—see what we mean?

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Silence Is Golden

Hollywood, Sept. 21 (INS).—Am I glad that I didn't take any sides when Darryl Zanuck and Sonja Henie were arguing. Both Darryl and Sonja are good friends so I stayed right in the middle of the road, listening to grievance on both sides, but said nary a word. In this case silence was more than golden, for Sonja and Darryl have kissed and made up with all difficulties on both sides forgotten. Sonja comes home to Twentieth Century-Fox January 1 to be starred in "Shadows in the Snow."

One of my reviewers who caught the preview of the British-made picture "The Voice in the Night" reported that Clive Brook looked like a million dollars and every bit as young as when he was making movies in Hollywood. Well, this news isn't about Clive—but it is about his 19-year-old daughter, Faith Brook, who has just been living in Hollywood for about eight months with her mother while Clive remains in England doing war and picture work. She has had a couple of bits in pictures since she's been here but nothing as important as this assignment in Alexander Korda's "Jungle Book," in which she plays an English girl who hears the fabulous story of the lost city Kipling tells about.

Arthur Polan Banks is a young man with ideas. That's why the stories he writes today have such a ready market in the movies. He just had an assignment to write the life of Barbara La Marr, and is doing research on the girl a judge once called "Too Beautiful." We have never had anyone in the movies quite like Barbara who was glamorous, impulsive and often badly advised, but so likeable that those who knew her will never forget her. If Polan's story turns out well, it will be the very first time we have had the life of a movie star on the screen.

Chatter in Hollywood: Investigation into the estate of the late James Stephenson reveals that matters are really in a tangled state for his widow. Stephenson, fine actor though he was, was never in the big money according to Hollywood standards and that most of what he left amounts to home furnishings, two cars and a small piece of property. A small insurance policy he carried had been taken out in England and since money can't be taken out of England now, it is impossible for any of the funds to be transferred to Mrs. Stephenson at this time.

So Now Maybe They'll Change It to 'Seedzapoppin'

OLSEN AND JOHNSON

doing the usual thing after their "fans"—presumably in Universal's publicity department—have sent them the "world's largest watermelon," made out of gutta percha and plastics, in anticipation of their forthcoming film version of "Hellzapoppin." The discouraged decoration on the left is Marie McDonald and the more optimistic cutie on the right, Elaine Morey. O Tempora! O Morey!

Foray Tops Newsreel Bill

Without a doubt, thrilling and sensational pictures of the war take top honors at the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week along with a splendid array of short subjects. The actual scenes of the Canadian troops taking Spitzbergen and destroying the rich coal and oil supplies reveal the entire exciting maneuver including the evacuation of civilians.

The official Nazi films of the first attack on Russia unfold without benefit of censor for these are the famous pictures captured by the British. From the Soviet side come pictures showing destruction of the Germans and thousands of Nazi prisoners being marched to the rear.

The home news is led with first pictures of the United States Army Louisiana war games, involving 380,000 men followed with 16-inch coastal defense guns surrounding San Francisco Bay; first selectees released from service; 75 sled dogs finish training for army; runaway kid tries to join Army, and United States Commission to Russia leaves White House. Domestic news of a lighter nature brings American Legion Parade at Milwaukee; Gen. Pershing celebrating his eighty-first birthday; the California wine harvest and Vyvyan Donner's styles for the ladies. In the realm of sports Mrs. Newell wins the women's national golf championship; Gar fishing has its thrills at Stuttgart, Ark.

Raymond Gram Swing tops the short subjects with "Broken Treaties" an unusual and dynamic picture of the Nazi drive through Europe, filmed in the new color animation. "Capital Sidelights" brings a new type of quiz on your National Capital.

Gayety

The current production at the Gayety has as its stars Dian Raye and George Murray, the former making her initial bow here and the latter a chap who has become one of the funniest comedians on the circuit.

Miss Raye, by the way, was the first to offer a "strip-tease" in England, and after viewing her two musical specialities we can easily understand why she caused such a sensation in dear Ole London. Dian is a pretty girl, possesses lots of personality and wears some stunning gowns.

One of the top performers in his profession, George Murray is at his best in the current bill. Working with Allene Dale, a clever "talking woman," Murray offers many amusing scenes, including the "French Maid" and "Modernistic Dancehall" skits.

Aside from the devastating Miss Raye, the revue offers such cute tricks as Eileen Hubert, Winnie Garrett and Lucille Rand. Miss Hubert's tap dancing and acrobatic numbers are cleverly presented. We found Miss Rand's dance routines unusual and daring.

Others in the cast, who add much to the entertainment, are Bert Carr and Harry Reed, comedians; Billy Stern, a nice looking chap with a fine voice, and George Shaw.

ART JOHN.

New York, Sept. 21.

John Gunther, who leaves for London soon, was introduced to Mrs. Raymond Massey merely as "Mr. Gunther" . . . Mrs. Massey assumed that he was Gunther, the New York furrier, and therefore politely steered the conversation toward matters which she thought were his specialization—furs. "Tell me, Mr. Gunther," she began, "what do you think of kolinsky this year?" . . . "Kolinsky?" replied the foreign correspondent. "Wasn't he killed in the 1938 purge in Russia?"

The National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis will release a documentary film which will serve as a report to contributors, showing exactly how their dimes are being spent . . . George Gershwin's mausoleum at Mount Hope Cemetery was completed last week . . . When playwright Sam Spewack left London last week, he presented to Vivien Leigh a treasured gift—a package of vitamin pills . . . Peg-Leg Bates, the amazing one-legged dancer, walked down Broadway yesterday and spied another peg-legged man. Bates approached him, and asked: "What size shoe do you wear?" When the stranger informed: "Size 8½E," Bates took his address, explaining: "I use a left shoe, you use a right. And since I always have to buy a pair, I'll send you the right ones."

Paul Patterson, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, just returned from London, thereby completing another of his series of long flights. Patterson's longest flight was to New Zealand. He went there from Chicago, where he had attended the Democratic National Convention last year . . . At the convention, he sat next to his star writer, H. L. Mencken. Every day, from morning until night, Mencken sat at his typewriter in the convention hall, and while 25,000 observers kept loosing their roars in political din, he wrote his running-story . . . On the final day, he and Patterson returned to their room. Mencken began to write a Sunday article. The publisher began to pack his bags, for the New Zealand trip . . . "Now listen, you," barked straight-from-the-convention Mencken. "Be quiet, please. How can I work if you make noise?"

At El Morocco's premiere last night, a Life photographer asked Mrs. Alan Lehman to pose with her son Orrin—whose photo recently appeared in Life's expose of a midtown private swimming party. "Well, you look all right," Mrs. Lehman told the photographer. "You don't look as if you'd take such dreadful pictures of Orrin—the way the other photographer did." The cameraman was Eugene Smith, who also had made the swimming party photos . . . One of the season's most promising radio series will be inaugurated at Lake Mohonk, N. Y., September 26, at the New York State Librarians Convention. It will be called "Speaking of Books." Jan Valtin will be the guest speaker, with a committee of critics Rex Stout, Lewis Gannett and Irita Van Doren . . . Cordell Hull has written an article for "Free World," the new magazine. When Alvarez del Vayo was asked how he had induced Hull to write it, the former Foreign Minister of Spain replied: "Mr. Hull is sympathetic to democratic principles."

'The Devil's' Due!

Hollywood, Sept. 21.—If the Theater Guild's revival of "The Devil's Disciple" is as good as David Selznick's, it will run throughout the winter. When you realize they did it in 10 days, it's an amazing bit of doing. It's Janet Gaynor's first appearance on any stage and nobody with theater experience would have attempted it. But Janet, bless her, came through with flying colors. Alan Marshall, our triple threat man, because he combines the best of Ronnie Colman, Cary Grant, and Errol Flynn, is slightly terrific. I've always thought Sir Cedric Hardwicke was one of our greatest actors, and after seeing his satin-finished Gen. Burgoyne, I still say he's tops.

They're still buzzing up Del Monte way over dinner the Salvatore Dalis threw. Dining room transformed into a grotto with nude store dummies wearing grotesque monsters' heads. Mme. Dali, with Brunhild braids surmounted by a sculptured horse's head, reclined upon a Roman couch. Table decorations were out of this world. Lady Mendl, and other distinguished guests, impressed. So was Hollywood. So much so that a major producer thought it an elegant idea to get Dali to work up a series of montage shots as background mood for his film. They approached the canny surrealist, thinking he'd be modest in his price. Why? He's shown no modesty in anything else. Sure enough, his asking price is $25,000, for work which would have taken a week. Ho! Hum!

If Peter Lorre and Martin Kosleck weren't such fast friends there'd be the makings of a first class feud between them. In "All Through the Night," "Maltese Falcon," and now "Joan of Paris," both men have been up for the same part with Peter winning out. Crazy part of the whole thing is that physically they're complete opposites, Peter, small, chubby and slow-moving, and Martin half a head taller, slender and dynamic, yet the choice invariably boils down to one of the two.

Talk about destiny shaping our ends! (No, I'm not writing of diets.) . . . Vic McLaglen was headed for Mesopotamia to join the army when a producer saw him working out in a gym and put him in pictures. Since then he's made a fortune in the army without peeling a single potato . . . From theater men, I hear the Navy Blues Sextette girls are so cooperative and pleased with the kindnesses shown them that they're having a big success, unlike lots of stars who go touring and think they're doing the audience a favor.

Church Heads Back Red Cross Roll Call

All Faiths Join In Rites Heralding Drive's Start Today

Under the brilliance of a cloudless September afternoon and amid the color of many flags, with uniformed service men and volunteer workers present, representatives of Washington's religious denominations joined yesterday afternoon in Red Cross Sunday services at the Watergate. It was a prelude to the opening of the Silver Anniversary Roll Call of the organization at noon today.

The heads of Protestant, Jewish and Catholic congregations, and Red Cross leaders asked members of all faiths and races to unite behind "the mission of the heart of America" in its month's campaign for 300,000 members in the District.

A stark realism was added to their appeals by the fact that as they spoke before the tranquil Sunday white of the Lincoln Memorial, mobilization orders were going out to nine Louisiana Red Cross chapters to prepare for a tropical hurricane reported to be threatening lives and property in Gulf Coast communities from New Orleans to the Texas line.

First Lady to Enroll

Flag raising ceremonies at noon today in front of the District Building officially will open the campaign for domestic and war relief funds, with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to be enrolled as the first 1941 member. Lady Mountbatten will be the principal speaker, and a roll call proclamation will be read by District Commissioner Young.

An invocation delivered by Dr. Edward H. Pruden, of the First Baptist Church, opened the Watergate ceremonies, after an overture by the United States Navy Band and the massing of the colors by Navy and Marine Corps color guards, Boy and Girl Scouts, and uniformed service volunteers from the various Red Cross branches.

Dr. Pruden pledged the support of Washington's churches in the Red Cross campaign, terming the drive "an opportunity to meet the great need of a suffering world at a time when that need is greatest."

After Edgar Morris, chairman of the District Roll Call, had pointed out that the Red Cross was founded upon a fundamental concept of all religions, "the teaching of doing good to others," Canon Merritt F. Williams, of the Washington Cathedral, asked interdenominational support of the drive, likening the Red Cross to "a social instrument of God through which His mercy is poured."

Asserting that the Red Cross reveals "the stark truth of the needs of human beings as they seek peace amidst the catastrophes of our own day," Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, warned:

"God is our Father only when we see men—all men—of every creed and color—saint and sinner—as our brothers. And only when there is repentance in our hearts, forgiveness on our lips and the will for our common righteousness in our lives, can we find our prayers answered."

Speaking of the gathering of many faiths as "the unified voice of men striving to better the lot of their fellows," Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, Dean of the Columbus University School of Law, declared that "under this banner on which gleams the blood-red cross, common expression is found of a bond which, in whatever words, is a fundamental in all of our faiths."

James L. Feiser, vice chairman of Red Cross Domestic Operations, and Sergio Huneeus, director of the organization's Pan American Bureau, also spoke at the ceremonies, which were presided over by Courtland D. Ferguson, Roll Call publicity chairman. Soloists and a combined choir from the Covenant First Presbyterian, Mount Vernon Place Methodist, and Epiphany Churches also participated.

Steeped in Gloom

'Reds' Absence Like Fog Over Harbor Police

"Private Reds," Chesapeake Bay retriever and mascot for the Harbor Precinct, is missing again and the Maine Avenue station is a gloomy place.

Each time the two-and-a-half year old male hound has wandered off in the past he has returned feeling better than ever and in an extremely good humor. But this time he left on the night of the aurora borealis.

That's why the boys down at the harbor station are worried. Nobody knows exactly when he disappeared. He just walked out to see the phenomena of the lighted skies, and hasn't been seen since.

A favorite with excursion boat crowds, Reds is a great one for showing off. He loves to jump into the waters to delight excursioners leaning over the rail to see the dog retrieve popcorn, sticks and other things that float.

When the harbor boat pulls out for a job, whether a drowning, a rescue or fire, Reds is sure to be among the crew. He also lends a paw with the mooring ropes. He has the gayest time while the boat is plowing up the river, barking at the gulls and running back and forth on deck. And the police are a happier lot when he is along.

Reds wears a dog tag, on the reverse side of which reads "Metropolitan Police, Harbor Precinct."

Last time he went off he returned minus his collar and tag.

Yesterday the police radio sent out the alarm.

The missing mascot is about the size of a full-grown police dog. His long ears lap over, and he has short curly red coat and a long tail. He was given to Pvt. H. S. Carrico, of Harbor Precinct, when two months old, and is a thoroughbred.

Three Citizens' Groups Will Meet Tonight

Three citizens' associations will lead off the week's civic activities with meetings to be held this evening.

The North Capitol Citizens Association will discuss proposed raises in the District water rate and the skip-stop system on the North Capitol Street carline, at its opening meeting of the season at 8 p. m. today at McKinley High School.

At the same hour the Mid-City Association will discuss tax and water rates at the Thomson School, Twelfth and L Streets Northwest.

Changes in the Lincoln Park Association's constitution will be considered at the organization's meeting at 7:30 p. m. today at the Kingsman School, Fourteenth and E Streets Northeast.

On Thursday at 8 p. m. the Fort Davis Association will meet at the Ryland Methodist Church, Branch and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. The group plans to discuss the need of sidewalks in sections of the area and the proposed increased water rates.

Motion pictures presented by the Brookland-Woodridge Business Men's Association will open the program of the Burroughs Citizen Association Friday at 7:30 p. m. at the Burroughs School, Eighteenth and Monroe Streets Northeast. Following a community sing, association members will consider the need for increased facilities at the Taft School.

$25,000 of Slain Heiress Missing

Los Angeles, Sept. 21 (AP).—A private investigator said today $25,000 in cash which Mrs. Florence Stricker, wealthy heiress, had in her possession before she was bludgeoned to death a week ago is missing.

A search of the home, Mrs. Stricker's bank accounts and safety deposit boxes has disclosed no trace of the funds.

Dr. Stricker is still in a sanitarium, where his physicians say he is recuperating from a nervous collapse. He is expected to testify Wednesday at an inquest.

mercial Trader of the Moore-McCormack Lines when the vessel was buffeted by high seas. The Coast Guard cutter Jackson was sent from Norfolk, Va., to aid the ship. Flames were reported under control and damage confined to the forward deck cargo.

Ships delayed were the Santa Lucia of the Grace Line and the Uruguay of the Moore-McCormack Line, both returning from South America; the Borinquen of the Puerto Rico Line, returning from Puerto Rica, and the Veragua of the United Fruit Line, returning from a West Indies cruise.

The Weather Bureau said it feared no duplication of the New England hurricane which struck just three years ago. At that time a low pressure trough extended along the coast, making "perfect passage" for the hurricane, it was said.

The Naval Observatory announced yesterday that summer will end officially and fall begin at 5:33 a. m. tomorrow.

Yesterday's temperatures in the District moved from 56 at 5 a. m. to 78 at 3 p. m.

Storm, Floods in New Mexico

Albuquerque, Sept. 21 (AP).—Albuquerque's 70,000 residents struggled through a storm-enforced gasless Sunday, deprived of natural gas for heating and cooking as a result of a washout which shattered the city's main pipeline.

Emergency crews repaired the break west of the city today, but officials said it will be at least three days before gas again will be available to hard-pressed householders and businesses.

Meanwhile, torrents from mountain cloudbursts made an estimated 1000 persons temporarily homeless at Carlsbad.

A wall of water 22 feet high roared into the southern outskirts of Carlsbad last night, sweeping through a working class section, washing out two railroad bridges and a highway span, and cutting off highway connections to the south. Red Cross and home guard workers evacuated dwellers from the flood areas.

Relief agencies feared there would be some loss of life. Six persons were rescued from the Pecos River, which at its peak, reached 22 feet from a normal depth of a foot and a half.

Chest Starting To Recruit Drive Force Early

Confronted with "boom town" conditions, the Community Chest organization is starting early recruiting of volunteer campaign solicitors, it was said yesterday in an announcement of two "kick-off" meetings.

The Metropolitan or Residential Unit chairman will open its drive for volunteer campaigners at a dinner meeting to be held at 6:15 p. m. today at the Columbia Country Club.

Volunteers in the Group Unit, responsible for soliciting business organizations, will meet at 12:15 p. m. tomorrow in the Elizabethan Room, Raleigh Hotel. General Chairman J. Clifford Folger will attend both meetings.

Men Rejected By Army Will Get Job Aid

Selective Service registrants, who are rejected at Army induction centers because they do not meet Army physical standards should be reinstated in their former jobs, William E. Leahy, District director of Selective Service, told Washington employers yesterday.

Instructing his staff to utilize every facility at their disposal to aid these men, Leahy pointed out that the Selective Service Act requires employers to reinstate men who have completed their training, and that men who are thus rejected are entitled to the same consideration.

"A man who responds to the call for military training is fulfilling his obligation to his country," he said. "When, for some reason beyond his control, he cannot be inducted into the Nation's armed forces, he must be considered as having discharged his responsibility under the law and should be protected in doing so."

While expressing his appreciation to District firms, who have offered to place discharged service men through the re-employment office in the National Guard Armory, Leahy further instructed local boards to warn registrants reporting for induction to make arrangements with their employers to cover the possibility that they might be rejected at the induction center.

Socialists Decry Lindbergh's Talk

Boston, Sept. 21 (AP).—The Socialist Party said tonight that Charles A. Lindbergh's reference to Jews as a group pressing this country toward war was 'at once a serious blow to democracy and to the movement to keep the United States out of war."

In a statement at the conclusion of a three-day meeting, the party's national executive committee said "although it is true that Lindbergh recognized and condemned Nazi cruelty to the Jews, that fact cannot undo the harm done by his other statements."

Asserting "no one nationality, race or people is responsible for this war, the committee said its origins 'cut across all such lines; they have their roots, instead, in an economic system."

Drive for 'Emergency Million' Opened by Disciples of Christ

The Disciples of Christ's Nation-wide "emergency million" drive began yesterday, when missionaries and other leaders made pulpit appeals for backing the church's work in national defense and for meeting the rising missionary costs.

Dr. W. T. Pearcey, of Indianapolis, leader of the drive, spoke at Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets Northeast, and at Park View Christian Church, on Park Road near Georgia Avenue; Dr. Royal F. Dye, of Bolenge, Mozambique, at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle; Mrs. George L. Hagman, of China, at Third Christian Church, Third and H Streets Southwest, and the Rev. George Earle Owen, director of religious education for the Chesapeake area, at Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park Road Northwest.

Declaring that "the time has come for sacrifice in the church," Dr. Pearcey told the Ninth Street congregation that the denomination's missionaries are carrying on heroically in war-torn lands, their resources depleted but their spirits unbroken.

He said also that there are many small Disciples of Christ Churches near defense areas whose facilities are being overtaxed by the influx of soldiers and defense workers.

Twenty-three thousand dollars will be used in the Washington metropolitan area to meet pressing needs caused by the population influx and the large numbers of service men, he asserted.

The Rev. Carroll C. Roberts, host pastor, introduced Dr. Pearcey.

The campaign is being conducted under the direction of the Unified Promotion Department of the denomination, and has the following on its Washington "team":

The Rev. C. N. Williams, pastor of Third Christian Church and executive secretary of the Disciples' Capitol area, chairman; the Rev. George Earle Owen, Richmond; Mrs. E. S. Cayce, State Secretary of Missionary work in Baltimore, and Mrs. G. T. Creech, State Secretary for the District Woman's Missionary Society, members.

Msgr. Guilday To Open Forum

The first in the series of the Charles Carroll Forum lectures will be held at the Willard Hotel October 26 when the Righ Rev. Peter Guilday of Catholic University will be the speaker. His subject will be "Charles Carroll and the American Way." Msgr. Guilday, professor of American church history, is regarded as one of the foremost authorities on the life and times of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The Forum, which is organized under Catholic auspices is open to the public. It will be conducted along the lines of The Town Hall of the Air and will be presented each Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at the Hotel Willard. It is headed by a committee of which the Rev. Dr. James A. Magner is president.

ELLERY QUEEN'S Mystery Potted Veal with Dumplings

2 pounds veal shoulder	1 tablespoon Lea & Perrins Sauce
1 onion, sliced	4 tablespoons flour
1 quart water	¼ cup cold water
6 carrots, sliced	2 cups biscuit mix
2 cups potatoes, diced	1 cup milk
2 teaspoons salt

Remove fat and cut meat into one-inch cubes. Simmer veal and onion in water for 1 hour. Add carrots, potatoes, salt and Lea & Perrins Sauce; continue cooking for 15 minutes. Thicken mixture with flour which has been blended with water. Combine biscuit mix and milk and drop by teaspoonfuls on top of meat and vegetables which are gently boiling. Cover closely and steam 20 minutes without lifting cover. This makes 4 to 6 servings.

No mystery at all to the hearty, wholesome goodness of this meal-in-a-dish. It's the touch of Lea & Perrins Sauce that turns the trick, and makes the family beg for more.

Try Lea & Perrins Sauce tonight, and see how this original Worcestershire points up the flavor of all your favorite meat and fish dishes. You'll agree there never was a better cook's assistant.

Needs Are Greater

To Americans who have been asked to give generously to so many groups for so many new and urgent causes during the past year the current appeal of the Red Cross comes like the voice of an old friend. Those who answer the roll call will know that they are supporting an organization with a long record for efficiency in alleviating the effects of terror and disaster. Equally important but less spectacular services financed through the roll call are first aid, life saving and accident prevention training; relief and public health activities; aid to the armed forces in peace as well as war; assistance to the blind and other handicapped persons. The Red Cross is a capable and dependable agent for private citizens in the work of preserving life and buoying up the human spirit. And its arm of mercy extends far beyond our borders.

Today the District Red Cross starts its silver anniversary roll call. In view of Washington's increased population, the goal has been fixed at 200,000 enrollments. Citizens who are mindful of increasing obligations, of rising prices and taxes, should not forget that the demands for service of the type the Red Cross gives have also greatly expanded.

Disturbing Incident

Maj. Edward J. Kelly acted with commendable vigor in suspending three policemen in connection with the charge that a prisoner in the First Precinct Station was fired at in his cell. The fact that one of the officers has been charged with assault with a dangerous weapon indicates the seriousness of the alleged offense. The Police Department and the District Attorney are under obligation to run down every material fact concerning the incident, and if it is found that a policeman recklessly shot at a prisoner in his cell, severe punishment will be in order.

The District should not have to enforce the law against law-enforcement officers. Men chosen for such positions ought to be of a caliber that inspires respect for law by their own conduct. Indeed, nothing is so destructive to public confidence in our system of justice as flagrant acts of injustice on the part of officials who are administering that system.

Reports of brutal conduct on the part of the police are frequently heard in Washington. Probably many of them are either exaggerated or untrue. But, in any event, the first responsibility of Maj. Kelly is to abolish such practices and rid his force of men who have no appreciation for the rights of citizens. Resort to the third degree in any form is despicable. Its tendency is, moreover, to turn the public from cooperation with the police to bitter resentment of police activity. Maj. Kelly ought not to consider this incident closed, therefore, until every vestige of strong arm tactics or other forms of police brutality has been rooted out of his organization.

Out Of Step

Planning for the use of man power in time of war or its equivalent is no less important than proper allocation of strategic raw materials. Some industries engaged in defense work are now experiencing an acute shortage of skilled labor, and in some localities unskilled labor is at a premium. As production of war equipment is stepped up, such labor shortages will undoubtedly be intensified. Certainly this is a time when nondefense employment by the Government should be reduced to a minimum.

One constructive step toward curbing nonessential civilian activities was taken last week by Administrator McNutt of the Federal Security Agency. He ordered the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration to stop soliciting enrollment of young men by use of sound trucks, posters, radio programs and other means of publicity. These two agencies, originally created to afford jobs and training to unemployed youths, had been competing with the Army and Navy as well as industry and agriculture for the services of young men. Indeed, they were apparently engaged in intense competition between themselves, for Mr. McNutt found it advisable to forbid each to accept any employe of the other without an honorable discharge.

Of course, both of these organizations are training some of their enrollees for service in defense industries, and the CCC doubtless helps to condition young men for possible military duty later on. But these services do not justify active solicitation of young men who may be more urgently needed elsewhere. On the contrary, the Administration ought to go much further than Mr. McNutt has gone and sharply curtail all CCC and NYA activities which do not contribute directly to the national preparedness effort.

Vision In Planning

It is reassuring to know that at least one governmental agency is planning the future of Washington with real vision and understanding. Particularly in these days of frantic building, there is a tendency to forget long-term plans and let the city grow in makeshift fashion. The new outline of future Washington sketched in orderly detail by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will not in and of itself forestall blunders of hasty planning. But it does give Congress and the administrative agencies which are seeking new buildings some very intelligent guidelines to follow. Future public buildings in the Capital should quite obviously be fitted into this pattern, with whatever modifications may seem advisable as the plan develops.

Washington and L'Enfant planned a truly magnificent city on the banks of the Potomac a century and a half ago. Since then, however, the city has often been bedeviled by the short vision of its planners. Over long periods there was no planning whatever in terms of a great Capital City. Some incredibly stupid blunders were made such as the location of the Treasury and State Department buildings on sites where they cut off the Pennsylvania Avenue vistas from the White House. Probably these mistakes will never be corrected, and the same may be true of any planless building of a permanent nature which may be overhastily approved now.

In recent years our planners have once more brought a great deal of vision and foresight into their work. The map prepared by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission contemplates a unified area of monumental buildings, memorials and parks unmatched anywhere in the world. From the Potomac River on the west to the Anacostia on the east would run broad thoroughfares developed to match that section of Constitution Avenue between the Capitol and the Potomac today. Most of the new development would properly be assigned to that important but now neglected area between the Capitol and the Anacostia to give the city a balance which it now lacks.

Many years will pass, of course, before this magnificent plan can be filled out by actual streets and buildings. That is what gives it real significance. The commission has given Congress a general pattern to follow instead of viewing each proposed building project as a separate item. The fact that more than 71,000 Government employes are now housed in rented quarters or temporary buildings is sufficient indication that the plan is not too ambitious. On the contrary, it is worthy of the genius which Washington and L'Enfant displayed in laying out the city. The real task today is to convince impatient administrative officials and Congress that this comprehensive plan should be the first criterion by which proposed Government building projects should be measured.

Housing Priorities

Ever since last June, when it became apparent that building material shortages would make housing priorities necessary, The Post has urged: (1) that the Government agencies define precisely what constitutes defense housing; (2) that nonessential housing be deferred until after the emergency. Both points, it appears, are now accepted in principle, but only partly in fact. All low-cost housing is apparently still regarded as "defense housing," so long as it is in or near officially designated defense areas. After a three-month delay, due to technical and political difficulties, the Office of Production Management has at last gotten around to priority ratings for 300,000 low-cost homes to be constructed in some 275 "critical housing areas." Two-thirds of these are to be privately financed and none may cost more than $6,000.

This move, effective today, is at least a first step toward distinguishing between essential and nonessential housing. It makes difficult, if not impossible, the procurement of building materials for more expensive, so-called luxury houses even in the designated areas. In effect, as one defense official put it, defense home priorities "will knock ordinary residential construction in the head." This is unfortunate, though in many areas necessary.

Under the OPM ruling it will still be possible to obtain a priority rating for a low-cost home in a "critical" area, even though such a home may represent merely the normal aspiration of the apartment dweller to acquire a place of his own. Apparently officials believe that the important consideration, in these areas, is to get more low-cost dwellings built. If an automobile mechanic builds a home for his family, the quarters he formerly rented can be taken over by a defense worker. Private enterprise can thus help to relieve a general shortage even though the houses built are not directly set aside for defense workers.

The blanket application of a $6,000 cost ceiling, even though most of the homes to be built will be in the $3,000-$4,000 category, imposes undue hardship here in the crowded District where material factors existing nowhere else enter into the picture. It may be that since Washington is one of the highest cost areas and since the demand here is greater for housing in the higher price range, a ceiling somewhat above $6,000 should be established. In any case it is clear that a judicious interpretation of the priority ruling is now in order if the OPM is ever to evolve a working definition of truly essential housing.

Bulgaria On The Verge

The kingdom of Bulgaria has about as much freedom of action as a man with a pistol at his head ready to go off if he does not obey orders. It is true that Bulgaria is the only ally of the Axis in Southeastern Europe which has not joined in the war against Russia. But this period of grace is nearing its end. Evidence is piling up that Hitler is planning a drive on the Caucasus and the Middle East either before or after he has concluded his campaign in the Ukraine where the German forces again appear to be moving ahead with blitzkrieg tempo. That may involve an attempt to seize the Dardanelles or march across Anatolia or both. To that end Bulgaria, apparently with the acquiescence of its Quisling monarch and the Hitler agents who constitute, so to speak, the Sofia government, is being prepared for service as a cat's-paw of the Nazis.

To ease the hurt, Hitler may hold out inducements to Bulgaria in the form of territorial concessions after the final victory. And the recent gains made by the Nazis in Russia may have persuaded King Boris and Premier Piloff that this victory is certain. On the other hand, it is doubtful in the extreme whether the Bulgar people have the slightest desire to go to war with Russia. Since Russia is responsible for Bulgaria's independence from the Turkish yoke, the rank and file in that little country entertain considerable sentimental affection for the Russians. But when Hitler cracks the whip they will have nothing to say about it. The considerable losses in man power resulting from the Russian struggle have begun to be felt in Germany. The Bulgarian army, small as it is, is now needed as cannon fodder by the insatiable Nazi war machine. So Bulgaria's period of peace and seeming neutrality may soon go by the boards.

Of Things To Come

The influence of women's clothing on the rise and decline of great civilizations cannot be overestimated. Probably the real cause of the French revolution, generally traced to Rousseau, Voltaire, Diderot, Montesquieu and the rest of the boys, was the style of hair dressing in the later days of the ancien regime. It sufficed to throw the whole nation into a veritable frenzy of head chopping. And there is hardly any doubt today that neither Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe nor Sir Walter Scott started the American Civil War of 1861-1865. It was the crinolines and bustles. The people, whoever they were, that designed the crinoline might have known that once it became the vogue, the boys just couldn't be prevented from putting on epaulettes, swords and silk sashes. One of these days, we are confident, the schoolbooks will list the principal events leading up to the first World War as (1) the peek-a-boo shirtwaist, (2) the merry widow hat and (3) the hobble skirt and sheath gown.

Thus you can imagine with what eager interest we are following reports of new fall fashions that have been coming from New York. We seem to discern three main trends—the classical Greek, the Mongol and the late Medieval. The Greek influence is represented by the waistlines and by the astonishing frequency of peplums. A peplum, in case you haven't mastered the fashion jargon, is something like a peplos. The Mongol and late Medieval (or moyen age) influences are noticeable mostly in the hats. Mme. Pauline, for example, is exhibiting on the one hand the Genghis Khan turban in red jersey and on the other a steeple hat and wimple right out of the quinzieme siecle. Thus we seem to have tendencies running counter to each other; to wit, a triumphant barbarism and a classical renaissance. We shall have to wait and see which of these styles becomes dominant before we risk a prognosis—but, between you and us, we don't care a bit for this Genghis Khan business.

Prolonged Injustice

Please ask Senator Burton K. Wheeler and Mr. Charles A. Lindbergh if they are sure they are not pleasing Hitler by holding while ne skins. Why do they seek a negotiated "armistice" allowing Hitler time out to build a navy?

Why don't they give us more facts and less ramrod tactics?

From the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Alaska to South America my experience with Americans is that all are willing to hear the "how" and "why" of things, but each is quite capable of making up his own mind.

When we had domestic troubles why didn't "W. & L." march out from the corner from whence "prosperity was ensconced" and lead us out of our misery?—or is their scope of vision limited to foreign affairs?

Bcause of mass persecution of Jews I would think that Christians the world over would rise in mass against Hitler.

Have "W. & L." assurance that Hitler will not turn against Mussolini the same as he did against Stalin? Will not Christians then look upon Hitler with a different slant? Just as Spain, with a government opposed by the will of the people, remained "red" about as long as a tree frog, what more can we expect of an enforced "new order" of Hitler except that the world will be pockmarked with revolutions for the next thousand years? Those contemplating enduring the "purging" during those years may console themselves by the thought that hell would not be so bad—if it only had a time lock on it.

No one has ever improved on Sherman's definition of war. But Sherman never expressed regrets at his part in war, because he knew that there are worse things than war and one of them is prolonged injustice. R. F. (BOB) SPICER.

In The Federalist

The President has made living history again. Using facts from the great American past guiding him in his grave decisions of far-reaching consequences for the present and future not merely of the Western Hemisphere, but for all civilized mankind, he has rejected among others the "tender whisperings of appeasers" and "the soporific lullabies that a wide ocean protects us" from the brute enemy of all humanity.

These tender whisperers and lullaby experts might do well to remember the prophetic words of Hamilton, 163 years ago, when there had been no idea of airplane hops from or to Europe. In the Federalist, No. XXIV, he says:

". . . Though a wide ocean separates the United States from Europe, yet there are various considerations that warn us against an excess of confidence or security . . . The improvements in the art of navigation, as to the facility of communication, rendered distant nations, in a great measure, neighbors. . . ."

Anti-Nazi Movies

Louis Bromfield's letter appearing in Tuesday's Post was most commendable, and coming from a man who has first-hand information about Germany, showed more real common sense than all the isolationist Senatorial subcommittee which so far has revealed nothing but that the movies are anti-Hitler, is trying very hard to prove that the Jews are the leaders of anti-Nazi thought in this country. Nothing could be farther from the truth, and I'm sure this subcommittee isn't going to fool anybody.

Whether or not these anti-Nazi movies are propaganda, they portray the truth. C. R. G.

'Keep Right' Signs

On the evening of Thursday, September 16, a ghastly accident occurred at a "safety zone" in front of Mount Alto Hospital. A man was killed, a woman was dreadfully injured. This terrible tragedy was brought about by a motorist who was apparently driving to the left of the zone.

In connection with this accident—and the ever-present possibility of many others like it—I want to ask some blunt questions. Around these street-level "safety zones" (which might better be called suicide zones) are what I can only describe as big metal "knobs," painted yellow. On each of those "knobs" is a sign, reading "Keep to the right: Police Dept."

Unquestionably, these signs (of which there are thousands in the District of Columbia) are regular, official Police Department signs, embodying a rule—just the same as upright signs that say "No Parking at Any Time."

If a motorist violates a "No Parking" sign, he immediately feels the heavy hand of the law. But the signs on the safety-zone "knobs," saying "Keep to the Right," are utterly, absolutely ignored. Not the slightest attention is paid to them by motorists. The disregard of them is total. And the police do nothing whatever about it. I want to ask "Why?"

I have stood in front of the Washington Cathedral on Wisconsin Avenue—hardly more than a stone's throw from where Tuesday night's tragedy occurred—and watched a traffic policeman standing only about a foot from an array of those "Keep to the Right" signs, on metal knobs on safety zones on both sides of the street—and I have counted 1000 violations of the rule in a relatively short time. The cop did not show the faintest awareness that anything whatever was amiss. Motorists, I repeat, all act as though the metal signs on the street, "Keep to the Right," simply did not exist.

I think it is superfluous to stress the deadly danger that this wanton, flagrant, and wholesale violation of these signs creates for the hapless persons who are standing in the misnamed "safety zones." With motor cars tearing by on both sides of them, there is no leeway for movement, no "margin for error." Any slight traffic mishap, a car emerging from an alley, a misjudgment of distance by some driver who is psychopathically determined to "weave," is likely to result in a butchery.

If these countless police department signs "Keep to the Right," on the yellow metal knobs of the safety zones, are regular, official signs, why is there not the slightest effort to enforce them? If the police department of Washington has no intention whatever of enforcing the rule on these "knob" signs, why are they not removed? Does the police department think that general respect for law is promoted by the existence of thousands of signs that are completely disregarded under the present regime? These are not rhetorical questions. They are practical life-and-death questions, of the utmost moment and should be answered. R. A. VANDERLINE.

Invasion Of Iran

The Rev. Wythe Leigh Kinsolving in his recent letter "Seizures," which appeared in your column, apparently sees no difference between various kinds of seizure—America's expansion in the Pacific, England's invasion of Iran, or Germany's rape of Belgium. To him all force appears to be the same. Fortunately there are few who will agree. He may, however, care to read this excerpt from a leaflet dropped recently on Iran by the heroes of the R. A. F.

"We don't want your food: we will bring food to all who need it, as we are doing in Syria. We don't want your goods; we will open our ports to trade as we are doing in Iraq. We come as friends, armed only against a common enemy. German agents in your midst are the precursors of war. We want peace in Iran for our own sake. German agents prepared the way for war in Norway, Holland, Belgium, Poland, Rumania and Greece. War came, and Germany occupied those countries where people were rich and prosperous and now are starving.

"The Germans prey on conquered peoples like starving locusts. If the Germans had had time to secure a hold on Iran before the arrival of the British troops, they, in order to hinder our advance, would have destroyed railways and roads built from your taxes, and your towns, slaughtered your cattle, burned your crops and turned Iran into a desert. From such a fate we are saving you, as we saved Iraq and Syria.

"Soldiers of Iran—we are marching into your country as your friends, doing nothing against your country's well being or freedom . . . Our greeting to you is 'Peace be with you' let your reply be . . . 'And on you be peace.'"

ERIC UNDERWOOD.

Washington, Sept. 15.

Ladies Can't Speak

It is apparent that all the German people know about the war with Russia is that it is a war. Hitler's presence at the scene of action is easily explained. It is to take the credit for any victory gained against the Russians. And maybe it would have been more dangerous for him to have stopped at home.

The pity is that nobody in Germany can raise their voices against a war in which millions of men are slaughtered for an undefined purpose. In Germany, women are not allowed to speak even for the purpose of propaganda. Frau Goebbels must prepare the dinner for the doctor, but not utter a single word of comfort or sympathy to her sex on the radio. The same in Italy. Signora Mussolini must not address the Italian people though she would stand a much better chance of being listened to than her husband. Adolf and Benito are both advocates of culture but they draw the line at anything like "votes for women" —even in the New Order.

C. KING.

Equal Justice

Congratulations on your editorial on equal justice of September 14. Why should this case have to linger so long! If there is a death penalty for rape, then all rape cases should be given the same penalty. If justice will give one case 6 to 20 years, all rape cases should be given the same penalty. If we have a court of justice, all should be given the same penalty. This white man is accused of attacking that poor little baby, 6 years of age, five months ago.

Why not use the next six weeks to clear all rape cases. And in the future regardless of race or creed treat all rape cases the same by giving all the same penalty with the same swiftness. H. A. MACK.

The Post Impressionist

Spies Of '76

Whatever may have been the forte of the American Army during the Revolution, one thing is certin—it wasn't espionage. But, for that matter, it wasn't the long suit of the British, either.

It was at dawn, 165 years ago today, that Nathan Hale, American patriot extraordinary, issued his famous statement, "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." Immediately after, he was hanged by the Tories as a rebel spy.

Near the close of the war, an equally personable young British officer, Maj. John Andre, met the same fate. Both visited the camps of the enemy openly. Both concealed their "information" in their shoes in the most approved Revolutionary spy manner. Apparently the spies of 1776 would as soon be caught without the identifying papers and damaging evidence in their boots as a cavalry officer would want to be caught without his spurs. It just wasn't done in the best regulated espionage circles, if the records of that day are to be taken as an indication.

And the records tell an interesting and somewhat amazing story of this highlight of Gen. Washington's secret service. The commander in chief was admittedly on a spot, with the British about to move on Manhattan Island after the American's disastrous defeat and retreat following the Battle of Long Island. He needed, "a good draftsman, one skilled in military and scientific knowledge combined with courage and caution" to secure details concerning plans and resources of the enemy.

Capt. Nathan Hale volunteered. His brother officers tried to influence him by reminding him that detection and death must surely be the fate of a spy.

"I am fully sensible of the consequences of discovery and capture in such a situation," Hale told them. "But for a year I have been attached to the Army and have not rendered any material service while receiving compensation for which I make no return. I wish to be useful and any kind of service necessary to the public good becomes honorable by being necessary. If the exigencies of my country demand a peculiar service, its claims to that service are imperious."

Apparently, Capt. Hale was reconciled to what, in those days, seemed to be the inevitable destiny of a secret agent. Any such volunteer automatically became a one-man suicide squad. Whether it was this accepted idea, or whether it was the young officer's innate dislike for any undercover work or somewhat naive sense of what constituted bravery and daring that led him openly to go into the British camps with a hail-fellow-well-met air and and the thinnest of excuses for being in their midst, is impossible to say. But that he operated with a frankness that scarcely could be expected to throw even a see-the-joke-tomorrow Englishman off the scent, is all too evident.

With no other precaution than to discard his regimentals for the homespuns and broad brimmed hat of his teaching career and armed only with his diploma from Yale (just why he thought this would throw the British off guard isn't explained in the records, but many Harvard men have drawn their own conclusions), he hired a privateer to take him across the Sound to Long Island, where he landed near a tavern presided over by the Widow Chichester ("Widow Chich") —a gathering place for the Tories of that section.

He passed this dangerous place safely and traveled on a full mile before stopping for breakfast and a little sleep, but was soon on his way to the nearest British camp. Sauntering into the commanding officer's headquarters he explained that he was just a poor school teacher looking for a job and incidentally was quite disgusted with the rebel cause.

Received enthusiastically and apparently without suspicion by the British, he went out in quest of a job as "teacher," searching thoroughly and openly every Tory camp and fortification in the vicinity, making memoranda all the while in Latin. For two weeks he investigated openly, made his notes and drawings with which to fill his shoes.

Cloaked in his "simple manner and dress" and feeling completely secure in this disguise, even satisfied with a job well done, Capt. Hale drifted into Widow Chich's tavern on the night of September 20 to await the arrival of the boat that was to return for him on the 21st. Hailed as a "good fellow" by the Redcoats gathered about, he spent a glorious "bon voyage" evening and at dawn went down to the shore to embark once more on the chartered privateer.

The ship was in and as he waved a greeting the heads and muskets of a half dozen British marines came up, bristling, above the rail. Hale turned to flee, but a voice ordered, "Surrender or die!"

He was taken before Lord Howe, who was quartered at the Beekman Mansion (now Fifty-first Street and First Avenue, New York), and convicted as a spy by his own admission and the drawings of fortifications found in his shoes. It was from Beekman Mansion, oddly enough, that Maj. John Andre was sent with secret papers in his boots to plot with Benedict Arnold for the surrender of West Point. Andre, too, was captured and hanged.

That these patriot-heroes were victims of the infant stage of military espionage, rather than of their own foolhardiness, seems reasonable. Even the secret cipher message, "There has been no augmentation by 592 or 680 or 347 forces. Every 356 is opened at the entrance of 727 and every 37 is searched. In the future every 356 must be 691 with 286 received," could be translated easily by almost any 10-year-old in this spy-conscious year of 1941 as, "There has been no augmentation of ships of war or land forces. Every letter is opened at the entrance of New York and every man is searched. In the future every letter must be written with ink received."

Thus operated the British and American secret service of 165 years ago. How far it has progressed since then is anybody's guess.

Russia's Plight

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Problem Of Aid

BRITISH representatives in the United States have been made anxious by the extremely pessimistic interpretation put on the turn of events in Russia by high spokesmen for the British government.

LINDLEY

The plight of the Russians unquestionably is serious. The exact military situation is hard to appraise; our experts, whose prognostications concerning the Russian campaign were almost invariably wrong, lack the data on which to make a guess, good, bad or indifferent. But a morbidly pessimistic view inevitably raises the question: why try to give the Russians any help?

In essence, this is the question which, more than any other, has plagued the British in their relations with this country. When they have depicted the military prospects of the antiaxis forces, and more particularly the security of the United Kingdom, in dark hues, the tendency here is to give them up as lost. Why waste effort on a doomed cause? Keep our ships and munitions at home.

When, on the contrary, the British and their allies seem to be doing well, the tendency here is to assume that they can continue to take care of themselves.

How to strike the balance which will evoke the maximum aid from the United States has been a most delicate problem for the British—and for our own Government.

WHEN THE NAZIS turned on the Russians, the devout hope, probably, of most Americans, was that they would devour each other. Our officials, like the British, believed from the outset, however, that the Russians were the weaker power. Although generally they underestimated Russia's fighting capacities, this diagnosis was essentially correct. But neither in the United States nor Great Britain did public opinion seem to realize that Russian resistance did not rescue the West from peril, but merely gave it an opportunity to be exploited.

Nazi gains are shown on the map. But, at worst, when compared with what it was, or was expected to be, last May and June, the situation today is incomparably better. Russia was a passive ally of Germany, the source of raw materials and a transmission belt for small quantities of still other materials vitally important to Nazi economy. The general supposition was that the Russians would surrender anything short of important territorial concessions without fighting.

When the attack came, the Russians were given, by most observers, from six weeks to three months of resistance. Few doubted that the Nazi would have Kiev, Leningrad and even Moscow long before mid-September, and that they would be at the Urals by snowfall. Many supposed that Hitler expected to crush Russia soon enough to launch a full-dress attack on Great Britain this autumn.

WHAT THE RUSSIANS have done has exceeded nearly all expectations. As they have withdrawn they have mercilessly destroyed factories, crops, power facilities and even houses. They are still fighting. Unless their morale suddenly crumbles, their predicament is less desperate than Britain's was in June, 1940, when the President shipped across the Atlantic a large part of our World War stores of rifles, machine guns, artillery and ammunition.

If the Russians can keep an army in being, and if it can be re-equipped, at least partly, with British and American aid during the next five or six months, Hitler will have failed, fatally. If the attempt to keep the Russians fighting should fail, there has been at least a gain of precious time.

This is the hard analysis of informed observers. It leads straight to the conclusion that so long as the Russians are willing to fight, every weapon that can be spared must be sent to them, and also that American production must be thrown into high gear. This, in the view of leading officials, is the clearly lighted road between the pessimism which sees only lost causes and the optimism which fails to see a crisis when it arrives.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

From Private Purkey

DEAR MA:

I am in the guardhouse again. It is all because I was with some boys last night when one of them whipped out his dice in front of a colonel. When the colonel dressed him down I had no more sense than to explain that in pulling the dice on him the fellow was just obeying the President's orders or shoot first and ask questions afterward.

I expect to get out soon. Anyhow I do not mind the guardhouse no more as it is kind of cosy and I have got so used to it I can't pass one no more without going in and giving myself up.

I could of got on one of them camp quiz programmes the other night, but I refused. I had spent all my life building up a rep for ignorance and did not want to see it ruined in one night. But I told the chairman I was with him in spirit, my spirit being about the only part of me which ain't too sore to travel any distance.

Inclosed you will find a new snapshot of me. The haircut is a dilly. The regular camp barbers were all sick so I had a dentist do it and I should of took gas. I serpose you will be serprised how fat I look and it is a great puzzle to me two on account of I keep putting on weight no matter how hard the army work gets. All my life I thought working reduced me and it always seemed to do so when I was home. Even a little thing like cleaning the ashes out of the furnace would reduce me to a mere skeleton. So how comes it that ever since the generals started mistaking me for a Army mule I have got fat? Not only that but I am harder and tougher. That's the sad thing about army life instead of breaking you down it makes you such a perfect fizzical specimen that nobody has any sympathy for you.

I am off to manoovers again. This is my fifth and I still don't know what they are all about. In fact I am almost as ignorant of what happened in each one as the umpires. I am as tired of manoovers as if they was playing doubleheaders instead of just one manoover at a time but I am learning not to worry and just to do what I am told and find out what the score was later.

But I am still all confused. Once a umpire rushed up and stuck a flag in me to indicate I was a destroyed regiment and another time one pinned a tag on me to indicate I was a smoke screen or some ground under repair or something. I don't give these umpires no argument but I would like to be able to grab one in the thick of manoovers and put a flag on him witch wood make him officially a piewagon that had been run over by four super tanks. No such luck I gess ma.

How is the war going anyhow? I do not get no papers regularly and my radio has called off the whole war on account of baseball. If you hear any news about where I might be lended let me know. All I hope is that it is to some country in the same lassitude as Miami becuz you know how I suffer in cold weather.

Love, OSCAR.

After Three Months

By Barnet Nover

The Russian Battlefront And Others

THE STRUGGLE in Russia, now entering its fourth month, has confounded the optimists as well as the pessimists.

NOVER

The latter were in the great majority here and in Great Britain at the time the Nazi attack on the Soviet Union was launched. They gave the Russians short shrift. They were wrong.

The Red Army has given the Nazi war machine its hardest fight. The Germans themselves now admit that between June 22 and August 21 twice as many of their troops were killed and wounded in the fighting on the Eastern Front as had been killed and wounded in all the other campaigns of the war combined. It is fair to assume that the struggle in Russia has been equally destructive of German materiel.

The optimists have been wrong, too. When, after the first headlong dash into Russia, the German war machine showed signs of slowing down the optimists began to assume that it had been halted, which was not true. They were convinced that it would not be long before the Nazis had run out of gasoline and lubricating oil, which has not happened and is not likely to happen soon. And they placed great faith in the Russian climate as a factor likely to insure Hitler's defeat in the long run.

PICTURES of the fighting in Russia do suggest that the rains which have from time to time fallen in this or that area of the far-flung battleground have tended to create difficulties for the Wehrmacht. The speed of the German drive into the eastern Ukraine during recent days proves, however, that Gen. Mud while a useful ally of the Russians did not succeed in playing a decisive role in any major engagement up to now. No more can be expected of Gen. Frost, that other meteorological ally of the Muscovites, whose appearance on the Russian scene is now eagerly awaited.

Winter conditions may, indeed, create something resembling a stalemate in certain theaters of the Russian war, although this is by no means certain. The Russo-Finnish conflict of last year was fought in subzero weather practically from beginning to end. During World War I the German armies on the Eastern Front did not always go into hibernation with the coming of winter. Some striking victories were won by them in periods when the temperature was well below freezing.

Whether the onset of winter will have a real bearing on the outcome of the Russo-German struggle will depend not so much on the degree of cold the German army will have to put up with on the Eastern Front as on what happens between now and when snow flies.

SHOULD the present German drive toward the immensely valuable Don Basin continue to make headway, Hitler might be in a position, before winter, to push on toward the Caucasus and cut off Russia from indispensable oil supplies.

In that connection the possibility of a combined land, air and sea attack to establish Axis mastery over the Black Sea cannot be ignored. German pressure on Bulgaria has reached the point where informed sources in Ankara and London are now convinced that the pretended neutrality of the Sofia government in the Russo-German conflict will soon be succeeded by active belligerency on Bulgaria's part. Bulgaria could then openly serve as a German base of operations for a naval assault on Crimea and the Caucasus and a jumping-off point for a land drive on Turkey, should the latter balk at voluntarily submitting to the dictates of the Axis.

WHATEVER happens in Russia it cannot be assumed that the third winter of war will be one of military inactivity on Germany's part as were the first and second winters.

The time factor, particularly as it relates to the speed of American rearmament, is something which Hitler cannot safely ignore. Nor can he fail to take into account certain strategic considerations arising out of the recent consolidation of the British position in the Middle East.

In the Egyptian-Libyan theater of war the odds favor the British for the moment. There can be little doubt that the British have been canvassing the possibility of an African offensive whose ultimate objective would be the capture of Tripoli, thus eliminating the last Italian foothold in Africa and paving the way for an invasion of Sicily.

However, the British could hardly afford to attempt such an ambitious venture if the Germans should succeed in driving through to the Caucasus by way of the Ukraine or across Anatolia to Iraq and Iran. In that event the supplies needed by the Army of the Nile would have to be sent to the Middle East. The resumption of the German blitzkrieg in southern Russia is thus having an effect not only on Russia but also on the strategic plans of the British in the Middle East and Egypt. These plans may now be due for rapid and radical revision.

THERE IS another possibility which the British must also keep in mind. A smashing German victory in Russia or, if that does not occur before winter sets in, the weakening of Russia's fighting capacity to the point where the German lines in the East can be held with a minimum number of men, would enable Hitler to proceed with his plan to drive across Spain to West Africa while resuming large-scale aerial attacks on the British Isles.

In planning to rush all possible aid to Russia at this time Great Britain and the United States are being governed by the most practical of all considerations. It is important for all the nations opposed to the Nazis to do what they can not only to keep Russia in the field but also to save her from becoming so weak that Hitler will be able to divert any considerable part of the German forces now fighting in the East to other battlefronts.

Prosperity For Farmers

Bq Cecil B. Dickson

International News Service Staff Writer

Income To Rise In '42

The year 1942 promises to bring American farmers the largest income since the record peak of $14,600,000,000 reached in the post-World War I boom year of 1919.

The United States Government is planning to buy a billion dollars worth of agricultural food products in the next 16 months to ship to the British and to its own troops in Iceland and other far-flung Atlantic bases.

Farm marketings for 1941 were estimated today by the Agriculture Department to surpass 10 million dollars, the highest figure in more than a decade. This is a gain of $1,600,000,000 over 1940.

Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard's new policy of "plenty" of farm foodstuffs calls for the largest production in American agricultural history in 1942.

Wickard declared the Administration's previous policy of "scarcity" to maintain prices had been reversed for one of abundance during the present emergency.

The new policy of abundance, Wickard said, was adopted because the practice of the past eight years of the AAA of reducing production was unsuited to needs in a national emergency. He said:

"I think I can boil it down to two simple statements: First, the people of the United States need more of some foods, they want more and they have the money to buy more; and, second, the Government of the United States has committed itself to provide certain foods to the British. By now it is certain that the United States will have to increase its production of certain foods if we are to have enough for ourselves and to meet the British requests."

Under the new program, the Agriculture Department proposes that Congress extend the one-year 85 per cent parity program on this year's basic crops for the "duration" of the present emergency provided it is given broader control over acreage planting of wheat and cotton.

In addition, Secretary Wickard has announced that until June 30, 1943, the Department will guarantee price levels on farm food products as follows:

Hogs, $9 a hundred pounds; butter, 31 cents a pound; chickens, 15 cents a pound, and eggs, 22 cents a dozen.

Furthermore, Wickard has called for increased production of milk; larger marketings of hogs, beef and veal, chickens, lamb and mutton; increased acreage of peanuts, soybeans and other oil-producing vegetables; proposed the lifting of the limit on domestic sugar acreage and increases in the output of potatoes, vegetables, garden products and forest products.

Announcing also that the Department will support butter prices, Wickard said:

"Great Britain needs pork, dairy products (milk, butter, cheese), poultry products and other foods. She does not need and is not likely to need very much of our cotton, wheat or tobacco for some time to come.

"Our stocks of these commodities are large. Consequently, we are trying to hold down on the production of these commodities. It seems the part of common sense to grow more of the things we need; less of the things we don't need."

In line with this, the Secretary has submitted to the chairman of the Senate and House Agricultural Committee's several so-called omnibus farm bills, which give the department power to curtail acreage of wheat, cotton, tobacco, corn and rice. But the pressure of Senators and Representatives, as well as organizations, against further limitation of acreage of wheat and cotton is so great that none of the bills have yet been introduced for consideration.

At present, the law sets a minimum of 55 million acres for wheat, while the cotton acreage is supposed to be cut to keep production at 10 million bales. Cotton acreage this year totaled 23,519,000 and the production, as of September 1, was estimated at 10,710,000 bales.

The Government owns 6,170,000 bales of cotton, while the carryover at the beginning of the year was 13,062,000 bales. Average annual domestic consumption of cotton is around 9 million bales.

Secretary Wickard said that until the surpluses of wheat and cotton are eliminated farmers should be "willing to adjust their production to demand." As a result, he had proposed that Congress give him authority to reduce wheat acreage to less than 50 million acres and cotton to an acreage that will limit production to 9 million bales.

The Neutrality Act

By Mark Sullivan

The Question Of Repeal

IN WASHINGTON there is widespread proposal that we should repeal or amend the neutrality law. That is the way it is put — "repeal or amend." But we might as well drop the "amend." If anything at all is done about the Neutrality Act, it would be repeal. So little of it is left in practice that an operation of amendment would leave nothing of it.

SULLIVAN

Of the comment this proposal has excited, the most important is that of Senator George of Georgia—important because of Mr. George's standing, the esteem in which he is held, and his relation to foreign affairs. Senator George's comment is cryptic—and because cryptic, ominous. He says that repeal of our neutrality law would be "necessarily an intermediate step." He implies that merely to repeal the Neutrality Act would "leave the American people in [a] state of confusion on the ultimate decision they alone must make."

By "ultimate decision," Mr. George presumably means decision whether to participate in the war. Mr. George does not imply whether he thinks this ultimate decision should be one way or the other. He merely says that if we are to do anything at all now, we should make the ultimate decision now—and not merely take an intermediate step that would, as he thinks, confuse the public.

WITH DUE RESPECT to Senator George repeal of the Neutrality Act would not necessarily be a final decision to participate in the war. Repeal of the Neutrality Act would be largely repeal of a dead letter.

The Neutrality Act consists of several prohibitions. It prohibits American citizens or corporations from loaning money to a nation at war, from extending credit, and from selling goods unless the purchaser nation pays cash and takes the goods away from American shores in its own ships.

Those prohibitions meant something—at the time the Neutrality Act was passed, two years ago. But they mean nothing now. For in the meantime we enacted last March the Lease-Lend Act. By this act, our Government, as a Government, extends practically unlimited credit to Britain (and the other nations on Britain's side), provides them with goods of all kinds, from war materials to food. Obviously, when Britain can get abundant money and credit and goods from our Government as a Government, she has no reason to wish to get them from our citizens as citizens. In short, passage of the Lease-Lend Act was in effect repeal of two-thirds of the Neutrality Act.

In the Neutrality Act are some other prohibitions which still have some meaning. The act prohibits any American ship from carrying passengers or goods to Britain, or other nations at war. To repeal this would make it possible for American ships to carry lease-lend materials from the United States to Britain.

Yet, in fact, this prohibition in the Neutrality Act has already been got around in various ways. American-owned ships are put under the flag of Panama or some other neutral nation. Also, the prohibition is against privately owned American ships—it would not apply to cargo ships owned by the American Government as a Government.

Again, we have said that large portions of the British Empire, outside the island of Britain, are not actually Britain within the meaning of our Neutrality Act.

THE NEUTRALITY ACT not only prohibits American ships from going within waters close to the war called "combat zones." Here again, we have interpreted "combat zones" elastically. At one time we said the Red Sea was a combat zone, later we said it was not.

There is in the Neutrality Act one prohibition of which much is now made. The law makes it illegal for any American cargo vessel to be armed—even one engaged in commerce with a neutral nation remote from the war. To get rid of this prohibition is the principal reason for the present suggestion to repeal the Neutrality Act.

But it is doubtful whether arming our merchant ships would add much to our effectiveness in the naval war we are now conducting against German submarines and surface raiders. Our merchant vessels were armed during the Great War. But, without looking up the record, one doubts if any armed merchant vessel ever sunk a submarine, or otherwise added anything to the strength of our naval attack.

When we enacted the neutrality law, we wanted to be neutral. But from that day, for two years, we have wished to be less and less neutral, and we have followed our wish. To repeal the Neutrality Act would be largely to repeal what no longer has much practical effect in law, and little in public opinion.

To repeal the Neutrality Act would not materially change our status, nor would it commit us as respects the two decisions ahead of us. These are: whether to send an army to Europe, and whether to participate in a peace conference and make commitments therein. When the time comes, if we want to do those things, we will do them. If we don't, we won't.

Pope Gives Taylor Reply To Message From Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, Sept. 21.—Pope Pius XII, bidding farewell to President Roosevelt's personal envoy, Myron C. Taylor, in a 50-minute audience today, gave the American a letter of reply to a message he had brought from the President on his 12-day flying visit here, it was reported by a usually reliable source.

At the same time, the gift to the Pope of Taylor's Florentine villa, Schifanoia, was announced. It was understood the Pope, at Taylor's expressed wish, assigned the villa to the Rosary College of River Forest, Ill., conducted by the Dominican Sisters, whose mother house is at Sinsinawa, Wis., to be used as a convent.

The source said the Vatican secretary of state's office worked until 1 o'clock this morning completing the English text of the letter to Roosevelt, which the pontiff first had drafted in Italian. Care taken in preparing the reply to the President, it was said, explained the postponement of Taylor's farewell audience from Friday to this morning.

Vatican sources insisted there was "nothing sensational" in either Roosevelt's message or the Pope's reply. They were believed to consist mainly of expressions of friendship, respect and desire for close collaboration in attaining one another's aims and the end of the war.

The actual transfer of the villa was made in Washington May 23 before Italian Embassy officials. Vatican sources indicated the villa would likely be used as a kind of postgraduate branch of the Rosary College after the war.

Taylor and the pontiff talked for 50 minutes alone and then the envoy introduced his wife to the Pope.

The Taylors plan to leave tomorrow for Lisbon, where they will take a clipper for New York.

Mexico Orders Teachers Stay Out of Politics

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Sept. 21.—President Manuel Avila Camacho has bluntly ordered Mexico's 80,000 school teachers to abandon all political activity September 30 and thereafter to dedicate themselves exclusively to teaching.

The new minister of public education, Octavio Vejar Vazquez, who recently succeeded the leftist intellectual, Luis Sanchez Ponton, informed directors of the teachers confederation yesterday of the presidential "unification" order.

Teachers disobeying the instructions will be subject to disqualification.

One of the most politically active groups in Mexico has been the school teachers and sharp differences have frequently divided them.

Conservation factions have accused some teachers of greater devotion to Communist politics than education. The Communist party itself has said that its greatest strength among government employes lay in the education ministry.

Avila Camacho's order appeared to be another step toward the middle-of-the-road position he has sought since his administration succeeded that of Lazaro Cardenas.

By the end of this month, Vegar Vazquez made clear, teachers must abandon all affiliations with the confederation of Mexican Workers, the National Peasants Confederation or any other organization whose interests are alien to teaching.

In reporting that the president wished the teachers to aid him in the "task of uniting all the nation's social groups," Vegar Vazaquez apparently indicated that less emphasis should be placed on Socialist instruction than now called for in Mexico's educational laws.

Electrical Inspectors To Convene Here Today

Three hundred East Coast electrical inspectors will convene at the Mayflower Hotel today for the seventeenth annual meeting of the Eastern section of the International Association of Electrical Inspectors, to be held here through Wednesday afternoon.

The convention, which is under the direction of General Chairman J. S. Zebley, of Washington.

Today's program includes talks by G. E. Kimball, president of the international organization, on defense roles; V. H. Touseley, of the National Fire Prevention Association, on interpretations of the electrical code, and F. B. Silsbee, of the Bureau of Standards, on static electricity.

Syria And Lebanon Face Famine As Winter Approaches

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 21.—Both the American Red Cross and the British army have sent food, clothing and medical supplies to Lebanon and Syria, but so precarious is the economy of these little countries that they are unlikely to recover quickly from Vichy pilfering and the ravages of war.

Their inclusion in the sterling bloc should help the merchants, but the tourist trade, once these countries' chief industry, will not be easy to revive. Moreover, financial aid which used to come from Syrian and Lebanese residents in North and South America is now greatly reduced, perhaps because the remittance habit was broken during the period when funds sent to the Levant fell into Vichy or Axis hands.

The food shortage is now the most imminent problem of Syria and Lebanon. Although Gen. Georges Catroux, head of the Free French forces, has found it necessary to severely penalize grain hoarding, this year's Syrian wheat crop is definitely subnormal as the result of bad weather and unsettled conditions. Syria never produces much more wheat than the two countries use.

Another source of loss, besides possible Vichy sales into Axis-controlled Europe, occurred during the campaign. Merchants smuggled grain by camelback into Turkey and Palestine while both the British and the French were too busy to prevent it.

The extent of the crop failure is illustrated by the fact that during the harvest seasons of 1938, 1939 and 1940, the markets at Aleppo, the Levant's leading grain center, handled 8000 tons of wheat monthly while this year it only handled 400 tons. Thus it seems likely that Syria and Lebanon, which depends on her sister nation for grain, need outside cereals to get through the winter.

There are few, if any, surpluses of cereals elsewhere in the Middle East. The Egyptian government has just purchased 150,000 tons of grain abroad to assure adequate supplies and keep prices down. Syrian imports thus must come from the British dominions or the United States. Egypt made purchases in Australia but since almost as many Syrians and Lebanese live in the United States as in their native countries, America seems the logical place for them to get aid.

The British have agreed to supply convoy protection for Egyptian wheat and would undoubtedly do the same for Syria. It is a question whether or not American bottoms can be spared from munitions hauling to bring the much-needed food to these Near East victims of Hitler's eastern ambitions.

Mrs. Jouett Shouse Makes Announcement Of Daughter's Plans at Party on Farm

Guests traveling the road to Wolf Trap Farm yesterday afternoon traveled under the expectation that something unusual was afoot—and they were not wrong for Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Joan Dodd, to David Athol Robertson, of Birmingham, Ala.

Between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock guests streamed up the drive to Wolf Trap Farm—the Shouses' lovely country estate in Fairfax County, Va. Mrs. Shouse had asked a number of her friends—those who assisted at Joan's debut last year—as well as members of the young set.

House guests for the weekend were the prospective bridegroom's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Murray Robertson, who came up from Birmingham for the occasion. Also a guest was his cousin, Miss Paul Robertson, who was here from Mississippi.

The young couple announced that plans are being made for a February wedding. At the moment they spend much of their time poring over blue prints, for they are planning to build a home—and are in hopes it will be completed by February. The Shouses have presented the engaged couple with some land on their Virginia estate. And it is there, but a stone's throw from the Potomac, that the couple propose to set up housekeeping.

She Made Her Bow At New Year's Party

Miss Dodd is the daughter of Alvin E. Dodd, of New York City, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Filene, of Boston. She attended Concord Academy at Concord, Mass., and finished at St. Anne's School in Charlottesville, Va., in June of this year.

At a gala party on last New Year's Day, Miss Dodd was presented to society, winding up as brilliant a season of debut festivities as Washington has seen in a long time. The party was given at the Shouse residence in Georgetown, which is known as the old Waggaman Mansion.

Mr. Robertson is chief of the Petroleum Section of the Division of Controls in the State Department. He was graduated with honors in the schools, of Commerce and Law of the University of Alabama. He is the son of the late Henry Murray Robertson, of Birmingham, where his mother still resides. The prospective bridegroom is a member of the Beta Chapter of Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Bride-to-Be Formed Beer and Skittles Club

The prospective bride, who is strikingly attractive, is an energetic member of the young set. Early this summer with several young friends she organized the Beer and Skittles Club which has been meeting every Sunday—purely for fun. The first party, in the nature of a picnic, was held at Wolf Trap Farm and others have all been out of doors with dancing, supper and beer.

Miss Dodd undoubtedly inherits her abounding energy and organizational ability from her mother, for Mrs. Shouse is quick to take up any cause she thinks worthy and make a go of it. Most noteworthy among these are the "Have Fun Carnivals" which she instituted several seasons ago to raise money for the Women's Institute of Professional Relations. With cabinet members as "barkers," pretty debutantes as "taxi girls" and Congressmen taking part in the sideshow the annual carnival held at Wolf Trap Farm is always a whopping success.

Mrs. Shouse, whose home in Georgetown is one of the loveliest, is tremendously interested in music and has been instrumental in putting a number of groups "on their feet" so to speak. She has long been interested in the Chamber Music Society that this season innaugurated outdoor concerts in Meridian Park.

New Counselor At Mexican Embassy Here

The Mexican Embassy has a new counselor, Armando C. Amador. He arrived recently accompanied by Senora de Amador, their 19-year-old daughter, Georgina, and their son, Julio, and are at the Roosevelt. Senor Amador was formerly with the consular service and has held various posts in the United States.

The Minister-Counselor of the Embassy, Dr. Luis Quintanilla, has returned from Mexico, where he spent his vacation, and Senora de Duhart, wife of the Second Secretary, and daughter, Maria, will return from there tomorrow. Another recent arrival from Mexico is the Ambassador's son, Luis Castillo Najera.

The envoy and Senora de Castillo Najera have been joined at the embassy by their niece, Senorita Ofelia Davila of Mexico. She is a sister of Senora Rogelio de Alfaro, the former Senorita Lupe Davila, who formerly made her home at the Embassy. Senorita Davila will spend the winter with her aunt and uncle.

The Brighams On Honeymoon

Lieut. and Mrs. Francis Gorham Brigham, jr., whose marriage took place at Emmanuel Church in Bel Air, Md., on Saturday, September 14, are now on their honeymoon at The Cloisters, Sea Island, Ga. They will make their home at 332 North Georgia Mason Drive, in Arlington, Va.

The former Miss Hester Amy Bull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Bull and Lieut. Brigham were married at a 4 o'clock afternoon ceremony with the brother of the bride, the Rev. Robert Lee Bull, jr., officiating, assisted by the Rev. Michael Kippanbrock, rector of the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white mousseline de soie. Her veil was held by a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of gardenias.

Miss Grace Bull, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. Allan McKissock, jr., of New York, cousin of the bridegroom, was the best man and the ushers were William A. Dickson, Gordon H. McKissock, James Winfred Bull, J. Edmond Bull, Stephen A. Milwid and Lieut. Charles C. Horbostel.

John G. Bennetts On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. John Grady Bennett, jr., are on their wedding trip following their marriage in the Memorial Chapel of the Army Medical Center at Walter Reed on Sunday afternoon, September 14. The bride is the former Miss Ruth Marlatt, daughter of Mrs. Mary Marlatt and the late Frederick L. Marlatt, of Olean, N. Y. Mr. Bennett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Bennett, of Raleigh, N. C. Chaplain Edward J. McTague officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her brother, Raymond J. Marlatt, the bride wore a white organdy frock made with a sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice and full skirt. Her veil was finger tip length and she carried a prayerbook with streamers of white gladioli. Miss Atholee Adams was her only attendant. She wore a blue lace gown and carried a bouquet of red roses. Murray May was best man and ushers were Jonathan Shearon and Rudolph May.

Guffeys to Return To D. C. This Week

Senator Joseph Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey, who are at The Greenbriar in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., expect to return to Washington the middle of the week.

Mrs. Carroll Miller, Senator Guffey's sister, will arrive in Washington on Friday from her farm in Pennsylvania where she has spent the summer. Mr. Miller will come here tomorrow.

Miss Joan Dodd, whose mother, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, announced her engagement to David Athol Robertson. The couple will marry in February

T. M. Davises On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McParlin Davis are on their wedding trip following their marriage here on Saturday, and after October 15 will be at home at 4348 North Henderson Road, Arlington, Va.

The bride is the former Miss Evelyn Beatrice Smalling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Benjamin Smalling, of Waterloo, Iowa. Mr. Davis is the son of Mrs. Eleanor McParlin Davis and the late Dr. I. H. Davis, of Baltimore. The ceremony took place in Faith Lutheran Church in Arlington, Va., with the Rev. George J. Grewenow officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by William K. Laws. She wore a gown of white lace with a redingote of white satin. Her fingertip length veil of tulle was draped from a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bouvardia with a white orchid in the center.

The bride was attended by Miss Evelyn Brown, who wore a floor length coral velvet gown and heart-shaped hat, and carried blue delphiniums. Dr. Juan Ignacio Elguera, Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy, was best man, and the ushers were Beverly Thompson, jr., and Robert N. Keeler.

The bride attended George Washington University, was graduated from Benjamin Franklin University, and is national president of Sigma Phi Omega Sorority. Mr. Davis was graduated from Johns Hopkins University and Harvard Law School and is now an attorney in the Treasury Department.

Miss Ruth Payne Will Be Married To Lieut. Allen

Mr. and Mrs. Mason Ernest Payne announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth, to Lieut. George Damon Allen, U. S. A., son of Mrs. Joseph B. Allen, and the late Mrs. Allen, of Takoma Park, Md.

Miss Payne attended the Washington School for Secretaries. She is a member of the Mary Washington Junior Chapter, N. S. D. A. R., and the S. A. R.—D. A. R. Junior Assembly of Washington.

Lieut. Allen was graduated from Maryland University. He is a member of Scabbord and Blade and the Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity.

Delphine Colquitt To Bow Dec. 27 At Sulgrave Club

At least one bud has chosen the date for her debut. Miss Delphine Colquitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Colquitt, will be presented to society at a tea dance at the Sulgrave club on December 27. This fete will be held between 4:30 and 7 o'clock.

Miss Colquitt is planning to combine studies with debutante festivities this season for she is attending Abbot Art School. She was graduated last June from Georgetown Convent. The Colquitts, who live on Hawthorne Street in Chevy Chase, are an old Washington family. Mrs. Colquitt as Julia Heyl, made her debut here at the home of her parents, Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Heyl on Wyoming Avenue.

Smiths Give Party For Ensign Hynson

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith gave a dinner party at the Congressional Club Saturday evening in honor of Ensign Frank Hynson, of the United States Navy. Ensign Hynson was a classmate of Arthur Clarendon Smith, jr., at Washington and Lee University.

Among the guests were Col. and Mrs. E. Kutschko, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hynson, their daughter, Miss Margaret Hynson, Miss Martha Totty, Miss Katherine Mertins, Mr. Sherman Henderson, Mr. James Clarke, and Dr. Claud E. Hobbs.

White Sulphur Still Thronged By Capitalites

Although the season is drawing to a close there are still a number of Washingtonians sojourning at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Stopping at the Greenbriar Hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Shepherd, Mr. and Mrs. Fairfax Leary, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Stanley O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Roberts, Miss Mildred Sutton, William G. Jones, jr., Mrs. David Weir, of Chevy Chase, and William T. Dooley, jr., and James T. Fleming, jr., of Georgetown University.

Mrs. Ferd T. Schneider, of 2920 Courtland Place Northwest, has returned to Washington after passing a week at White Sulphur, where she was joined by her son, Lieut. Ferd T. Schneider, jr. The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Albert Evans, of The Highlands, have concluded their stay. Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward recently returned home from the spa.

Pop Concert Draws Society

Reservations for Washington's first "Pop" concerts, which open tonight at 8:30 o'clock at Riverside Stadium, include many high ranking officials.

Among those who will be on hand to welcome the National Symphony's entry into the Pops field will be Attorney General Francis Biddle, Senator Pat McCarran, and Representative Jennings Randolph.

The District Commission will be represented by Gen. Charles Kutz and Guy Mason; and a sizable delegation of Washington society will include Miss Alice J. Clapp, Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Brooks, and Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Finkenstaedt.

Some 5000 others will join the above in Washington's first experiment in the combination of beer hall and symphony concert. They will hear a program under Hans Kindler's direction that will include such favorites as waltzes and polkas by Johann Strauss, George Gershwin's "Summertime," Lehar's "Gold and Silver" waltz, Victor Herbert's "Dagger Dance," Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance," and the Third Movement from Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony.

Following the reception, the couple left for a flying honeymoon. They will go first to Florida and from there will fly over the Southern route to San Francisco. The couple will make their home in Redwood City, Calif.

The bride attended the University of Maryland and Georgetown University School of Dental Hygiene. Dr. Leigh attended the University of Utah and was graduated from the Medical School of Southern California.

Joseph V. Solaris on Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vincent Solari are on their wedding trip in Atlantic City and upon their return will live in Washington. The wedding of the former Miss Mary Louise Verdi, daughter of Mrs. Salvatore Verdi, took place in St. Peter's Catholic Church Sunday August 31, with Msgr. E. J. Connelly officiating. Mr. Solari is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Solari of Boston.

The bride, wearing a white silk jersey gown, the bolero of which was trimmed in gold kid, was escorted down the aisle by her brother, Joseph Verdi. Her fingertip veil of tulle flowed from a juliet cap of the same material and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white gladioli.

Miss Sarah Verdi, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. She wore a gown of white embriodered organdy with puff sleeves and a ruffled organdy hat trimmed with flowers. Her bouquet of talisman roses was also an old-fashioned one. Guido Palumbo, also of Boston, served as best man.

The bride's mother wore a gown of navy blue and white chiffon and the groom's mother wore a blue and gray print dress, each having a corsage of talisman roses. For traveling, the former Miss Verdi had selected a beige and green ensemble with a hat of black and green suede.

Mrs. Solari attended Buffalo State Teachers College and Mr. Solari is a graduate of Boston College.

Season's Hat Styles Suit All Shapes of Faces; May Bewitch or Detract—Depending Upon Wearer

The curved brim of the black felt (left) minimizes a square jaw, the forward tilt shortens face. Note how backward tilt of hat, above, lengthens face.

Long, Square Face

Narrow, angular short face

Square, short face

The protruding brim of the felt beret balances the nose, makes profile appear more regular. Note how the slant brim casual, above, sharpens the features.

Pointed nose, receding chin

Upturned Nose, receding chin

Rolling brim of profile hat (left) enables the woman with irregular features to accent her best points. Off-the face style, above, is too revealing.

Irregular features

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

There are enough different styles of hats this season that no woman need feel she must buy a type that is unbecoming to her. Women's Wear Daily worked out a scheme recently whereby a woman can tell what hat will be most becoming to her particular shape of face. In a series of sketches, such as on this page, the season's shapes were presented in their wrong and right aspects. Here are shown a few of these with accompanying photographs of the correct hats for varied types of faces. For example, the large sweeping brim shape should not be worn by a woman with a short, full face; the off-the-face, regular brimmed hat should not be worn by a woman with a long, square face, and the straight forward beret shape should not be worn by a woman with an angular, short face

Make New Fall Draperies

HERE'S a delightful idea in swag draperies—and not the less delightful because you can so easily make them yourself.

That long elegant swag that you may swoop so gracefully across your two windows—joining them in a lovely picture—is of the simplest type, straight and unlined.

Smart to choose for it a color and fabric contrasting with your side draperies. For instance, a wine velveteen swag would be stunning with French blue moire side draperies.

To make the swag, just cut a length of fabric, slant ends and drape through three rings.

Side draperies and glass curtains are swiftly and smartly made, too, when you know professional ways to measure and sew.

For fullness, cut fairly heavy fabrics one and a half times the space to be covered, thinner fabrics two to three times. In lining draperies, allow a one-inch turn-in of outer fabric along sides so lining won't show.

Our 40-page booklet, "Make Your Own Curtains and Draperies," gives complete directions for sewing lovely draperies, drapery-curtains and glass curtains. Includes directions for French headings, swags, holdbacks. Suggests colors, fabrics, trimmings.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Make Your Own Curtains and Draperies," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Fashion Turns Full Cycle On Orientals

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

When Oriental rugs were being imported by boatloads, the fastidious decorators decided that they were too common . . . now, when the supply of Orientals suddenly becomes threatened, perverse fashion suddenly pounces upon them and recognizes their beauty once more. In short, Orientals are showing up in smart places just now when they're getting scarce.

Those of us who have Orientals are a little puzzled about how to make the most of them . . . there have been so few exhibit rooms showing them in so long. Today we will endeavor to answer some readers' inquiries that deal with this very problem.

Design for Sarouk

Mrs. K. T. R. writes: "We're planning some changes in our living room and would appreciate your help. The rug is a Sarouk, with ruby and blue tones predominating. The three-piece upholstered set needs slip covers, the walls will be repaired. Most of the other furniture is mahogany. What would you do about walls, slip covers, new curtains?"

Why not have the walls painted in a pale water color blue . . . then have the upholstered pieces slip covered in faced blue denim or in a textural fabric in pale blue? The curtain draperies might be of flowered sateen on a light blue ground. Use ruby glass for accessories.

With Eighteenth Century

Mrs. E. A. S. writes: "Our furniture is eighteenth century English, our rug a Kirman with an ivory ground and many colors in the pattern. I want to recover my upholstered pieces, do the walls over and get new curtains and lamps. What would you suggest?"

A lovely light green would be beautiful with your Kirman rug . . . then perhaps light green moire draperies over cream ninon glass curtains. For the sofa, a striped fabric in several shades of light green and maybe another color would be stunning, then have a pair of chairs in light green leather and an odd chair perhaps in a flowered material that's predominantly light green in effect. Use silver and crystal for accessories and lamps.

Rusty Anchor Buttons Give Suit a Salty Look

Hollywood, Calif.—It's the precise row of rusty gold anchor buttons on sleeves and the set-in belt of her jacket that give a salty air to Lorraine Gettman's suit in light gray angora wool jersey. Lorraine is a recent addition to the Warner Studio roster. The rusty anchors, processed to appear just out of the briny, trim the heavy cuffs from wrists to elbow.

Her wide-brimmed sailor is in matching jersey with a fishnet snood of heavy rust-colored yarn. Lorraine carries a rust capeskin bag to complete her smart ensemble in two colors.

Old-Time Colors Stage a Revival

Hollywood, Calif.—In designer Milo Anderson's current vignette of the fall mode, such old-fashioned colors as eel gray, snuff, mahogany, mauve, wisteria, mulberry, blueberry, ivy green and plush red will be revived. All the winey shades are due, also primrose pink and blues inspired by the color of quaint old teapots. Milo is particularly fond of a rich claret shade. Around the Warner studio, Milo is considered the authority on dramatic combinations of all these rich old colors because he has designed the clothes for so many costume pictures, the most recent being Olivia de Halilland's 1860 wardrobe for "They Died With Their Boots On."

Tape Tells Tale of Faults In the Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

THE MOST impressive things about the Fifth Avenue salons are the broad A accent, the insistence on complete and accurate measurement tests.

Some of these places are downright fussy. Not only do they measure you from top to toe, but throw in such extras as the neck, the head and the length of the arm. The reason for these I have never been able to fathom. But at the finish you don't know just where to start remodeling.

If you are beginning a figure program on your own, you can dispense with some of the frills. But by all means take the four important measurements — bust, waist, hips and thighs. That is the only way you can get a clear picture of what is wrong. You can't trust your mirror. It registers your faults but it is hard for you to be your own critic. You'll find the tape is not in the least biased.

How to Measure

Start with the bust. Take a deep breath and exhale, then circle the tape around the back and draw it across the center of the bust. If this portion of the figure is not naturally high and firm, measure with your brassiere on.

Now for the waistline. Circle the tape smack at your waist and draw it comfortably snug. Then, so as not to cheat, ease 'em a bit.

The hips should be measured at the largest circumference to include all proturberances. Take a side view of yourself in the mirror and circle the tape around that part which the doctor dubs the buttocks.

The thighline is not one of the so-called pivotal measurements, but it is influenced by the hip measurement and should be included in your plans for slimming. The slight-framed girl has a lovely thigh at 20 inches, the stocky girl at 22 inches. Measure one thigh at a time, circling the tape around the largest area.

Keep a Record

Jot all your measurements so that you will be able to see just what you are up against. In the well proportioned figure, the waistline is about eight inches less than the bust—if you were a model or a movie star you would aim at a 9 to 10-inch difference between the two measurements. Your hips should not be more than 2 inches larger than the bust. By comparing your measurements as they actually are, you will know where to concentrate your exercise.

Measurements are not the whole story. As a final checkup on your figure, stand sideways to the mirror again for a critical view of your silhouette. It may be that sway back and protruding abdomen are to blame for your hips, rather than excess hip inches. In this case, the correction is to tone the muscles of the lower abdominal wall and to strengthen the lower back muscles, and we'll go into the type of exercise in a later article.

Bustle Returns To Provide Puff For Bette Davis

Hollywood, Calif.—Orry-Kelly likens some styles to that famous Arab who folded up his tent and stole silently away. They leave the girl who buys too soon holding a conceit as dated as yesterday's headlines.

"But sometimes there's an unexpected right-about-face," Kelly adds. "What became a passing fancy last year decides to turn up again this year as a true fashion. This is the history of the bolero, which had its ups and downs for years.

"It's also the history of the bustle!

'Remember, two years ago, when the oft-predicted bustle mode finally arrived? A few women, daring to repeat a style that sophisticated moderns chuckled over when they viewed grandma's seemingly capacious derriere in the plush-bound album on the parlor table, wore our streamlined bustle dresses. But there weren't many and the bustle died a quick death.

"Only to turn up two years later—in the fall, 1941.

"This year's bustle frock, which we expect to be really popular, takes many different means of achieving 'that certain back interest.' It may appear in bustle ruffles, bustle tiers, bustle bows or bustle drapes.

"As we've interpreted it in a dress Bette Davis wears in a current picture, it appears in very generous loops and puffs. The material is a soft and clinging black silk jersey styled with long bodice, rounded shoulders, long, tight sleeves and modest neckline. Bette wears a simple strand of pearls from her own jewel box, because the neckline is quite severe."

The Gentler Sex—By Malvina Lindsay

Big Strong Man

She—Oh darling, I'm so glad you've come!

He—What's the matter?

She—Oh simply everything's gone wrong—

She—Well but—

He—Now don't get hysterical!

She—I'm not, only—

He—Listen! Just keep hold of yourself. Now sit down and tell it all calmly.

She—Well in the first place, Viola broke one of the Spode china plates—

He—Is that all! Now what's a plate more or less—

She—But it's part of the set your mother gave us. And after that the Blinks' dog and some old cur got in a terrible fight right in the midst of the petunias and simply ruined everything—

He—Well, I certainly wouldn't let myself get upset over a dog fight. You ought to have more self control.

She—And then while Viola and I were trying to stop the dog fight, the cherry pie we were going to have for dinner burned to a crisp—

He—I wouldn't worry—say, though, you ought to be more careful about things like that. Did you make another?

She—Oh yes, and then my good black dress came back from the cleaners so tight I simply could not get into it, and I was counting on it this fall, and I don't know on earth what I'm going to do—

He—There you go! Getting excited and letting your imagination run away with you. You ought to learn to take things in your stride.

She—And now the kitchen faucets are dripping again and something's the matter with the socket in the reading lamp.

He—Forget it! Forget it! Take it calmly. Things'll all work out in the long run—if you just keep your head.

She—And then on top of all that when the laundry came back one of my big new towels that I got at the August white sales was missing, and two pairs of your shorts—

He—What! My shorts missing!

She—Yes and then—

He—Well did you do something? Did you call anybody? What did they say?

She—They said they'd try to find them—

He—Find 'em! They'd better find 'em! They had no business losing 'em! I simply can't understand why a laundry—

She—And then another awful thing happened! The yard's only half cut and the Sunshine Pals are going to meet here tomorrow afternoon.

He—Oh, well, I wouldn't get excited about that—say, why is the yard only half cut?

She—Oh, the man who cut the grass broke the lawn mower—

He—What! My new lawn mower!

She—Yes, he was trying to mow the rock garden—

He—Good heavens! Why didn't you tell me! Where is he now? Didn't you do anything?

She—Sh! Please sit down. There wasn't anything to do—

He—Do! There's plenty to do! Just let me get hold of that guy! I knew he was no good in the first place. I wouldn't have hired him if it hadn't been for you—

She—Sh-h! Please don't talk so loud!

He—I'm not talking loud! I'm going to get hold of that bum if it's the last thing I ever do! I'm going—

She—Oh, yes, and before I forget it, the garage man called and said he'd been too busy to get to your car today and you'd have to wait—

Shipyards Speeding to Goal of Two Ships a Day

This is the first of a series by Frank Kelley, who has just returned from a tour of American shipyards.

By Frank Kelley

From Maine to Florida, from California to Washington and along the Gulf Coast, American shipyards echo the beat of riveters' hammers on steel, giant cranes turn and dip and dark hulls take shape on ways nestling in a forest of scaffolding. A new merchant fleet is being built to bring vital defense cargoes from the far seas to this country, to take war material out to nations fighting the dictators and to regain in peace time the maritime supremacy enjoyed by the United States when its graceful clipper ships roamed the ocean highways.

The shipbuilding program, under the direction of the United States Maritime Commission, has as its goal the construction of 1383 freighters, tankers and passenger-cargo vessels by the end of 1943. The ultimate cost will be more than $3,000,000,000. When the program is fully under way next year ships will be launched at the rate of more than two a day.

Not since the last war has this country buckled down to such a shipbuilding effort. Then our output of merchantmen was even more prodigious, but it came too late to be of any use. From the great emergency yard of Hog Island, near Philadelphia, with its 50 ways, and from dozens of other yards, came a total of 2300 ships. None saw wartime service.

Stupendous Task

Today we can't build ships fast enough to meet our own needs, to keep pace with the sinkings, at a rate of between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 tons a year, to meet the shipping requirements of our pledge to aid Great Britain, Soviet Russia and China in their resistance to aggression. That does not mean that our shipbuilding is not bold enough or big enough. You cannot, after shipbuilding has been neglected for 20 years, launch a vast fleet over night.

CONSTRUCTION AT FEDERAL SHIPBUILDING & DRYDOCK CO.

Fortunately, by the time this war began, our shipbuilding was in its renaissance. Under the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, passed by Congress under the stimulation of a President who knows the sea, the United States Maritime Commission was created, with the duty of re-establishing the once powerful American merchant marine, of providing adequate auxiliary vessels, without which our growing Navy would be useless, and of recruiting and training personnel for an expanded merchant fleet.

500-Ship Program Was Starter

The same act of 1936 abolished mail subsidies to American ship operators and substituted a policy of making grants to cover the difference between building and operating ships under the American flag and of building and operating them under foreign flags with cheap labor and cheap materials.

The Maritime Commission, today one of our fastest-growing defense agencies, started humbly with a staff of about 100. Its first task was to survey this country's shipping needs and to replace worn, obsolete tonnage with modern, fast, efficient carriers of freight and passengers.

The commission soon embarked on a 10-year program of building 500 ships, or 50 ships a year. That was a peacetime conception, and it provided the framework for the large-scale projects dictated by the war.

The 500-ship program was known as the long-range program. Under it 106 vessels had been delivered by September 2. In line with its second duty of providing auxiliaries for the armed forces, the commission had by August 15 turned over 107 ships to the Navy and 21 to the Army, totaling 1,196,996 tons. Notable among them was the former United States liner America, now the naval transport West Point. The 27,000-ton America was the first merchantman constructed under the Maritime Commission's 500-ship program and the largest ever built in an American yard. Two 35,000-tonners, planned for the Pacific trade, will be held up until after the war.

Contract Awarded in 1937

The commission awarded the contract for the America in the fall of 1937. A few months later the commission contracted with the Standard Oil Co. and shipyards for 12 fast tankers, adaptable as naval auxiliaries in case of emergency. The oil company paid for the ships, but the commission provided $380,000 apiece to equip the tankers with more power and special defense features. Today all 12 have been taken over by the Navy.

Meanwhile, the commission's own technical staff was designing fast freighters and cargo-passenger liners for the long-range program. three types were evolved: the C-1, C-2 and C-3. They ranged in size from 6000 to 12,000 tons and in speed from 14 to 16½ knots. Their fuel consumption was low, their operation economical.

In the spring of 1938 the commission contracted for 20 of the C-2 type. Contracts for other types followed. By November 1, 1939, the commission had ordered 141 ships. The war accelerated the program and today more than 400 vessels of the long-range program have been ordered.

Nature Lovers Explore Wonders of Lafayette Park on 'Tree Walk'

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

ROY MYKLEBUST, of 14 Sixteenth Street Southeast, who aspires to perfection in the photography of leaves, was among the first to arrive at the tree walk in Lafayette Park yesterday.

The tree walks are held once a year by the National Capital Parks Service and among the throngs attending are many old-timers who come every year.

The tree walks attract crowds of an unpredictable sort; depending, it appeared yesterday, on the elements of loneliness, the actual love for trees, curiosity that might center on a tree or anything else, and the number and character of people sitting on the park benches when the walk begins.

FOR example, as Park Naturalist George Petrides, jr., 1333 Fairmont Street Northwest, said yesterday, "there probably won't be many at the start, but the crowd will enlarge as it goes along."

PARK NATURALIST PETRIDES POINTS OUT PIN OAK

It did.

Before the gingko tree was reached a roll call was made and Texas, Ohio, Maine, New York, Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, California, Washington State, Colorado, Iowa and Illinois were represented.

Some got up from the park benches as the crowd of more than 100 surged past toward inspection of the Irish Yew tree. Unaware of the situation, these newcomers clung to the crowd fringes and catching a snatch or two of the lecture grew interested. Then they began contributing their own knowledge of the Irish Yew with whomever was near and, before the pin oak was reached, were confirmed tree walkers.

The actual tree lovers could be distinguished from the lonely people, and the curiosity seekers, because they took notes of what the lecturer said, as in the case of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Carten, 1701 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, who came here from Massachusetts and were delighted to know Washington afforded tree walking.

UTTERLY indifferent to trees were three boys who carried shoe shining kits and badgered the tree walkers to buy a shine. They were stopped at the cyprus tree when the lecturer disclosed that the park squirrels eat the signs which give the names of the trees. The boys turned away to find squirrels that had such appetites.

This helped.

The Kentucky coffee tree got its name from Civil War soldiers who made coffee from the berries. All called answer in unison when the lecturer asked them to name a tree which happened to be a holly.

A tree walker was eating a horse chestnut when a lady cried "that's poison," but he kept on chewing, explaining it only tasted like tannic acid.

Farther along, a brunette passed in a blue flowered dress. Several gentlemen had missed much information on the gingko tree. When they finally turned their attention back to the lecturer.

Back in the old days there were 92 trees of different variety in the park. Now there are only 48. To investigate them requires two hours which pass very swiftly, if you love trees and a crowd.

National U. Offers Law, Economics, Government

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

NATIONAL University, a school that once numbered five Presidents of the United States among its administrative officers as ex-officio chancellors, will begin its seventy-second year of classes today.

The university "in the heart of downtown Washington" was founded as a national lawyer training school, destined in the minds of its founders to become the national institution of higher learning that Washington and Jefferson envisioned. National at one time had its diplomas signed by Presidents Grant and Garfield, and had expanded to include schools of medicine and dentistry. Now, its 700 students are divided between schools of law and economics and government and a liberal arts junior college.

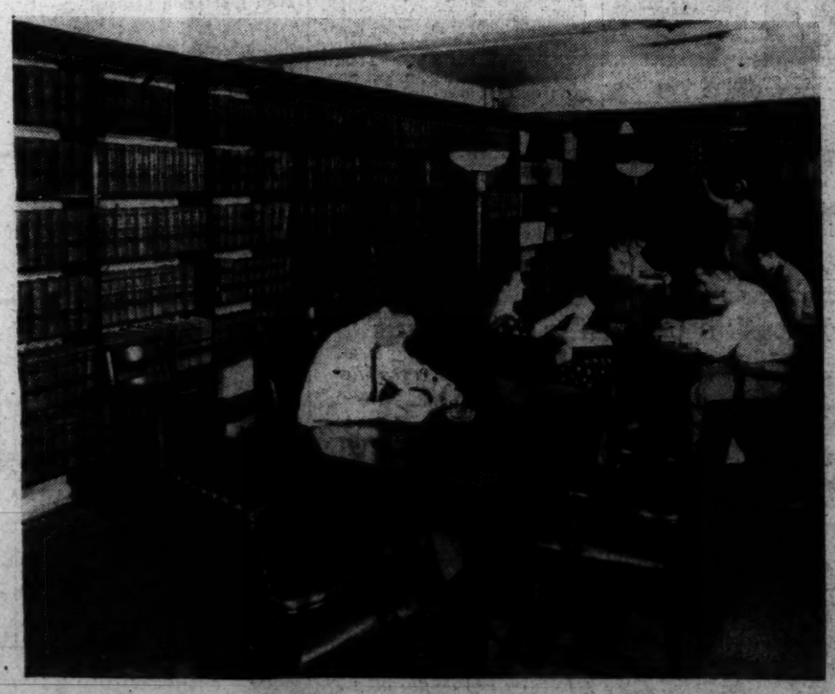
MOOT COURT AT NATIONAL U.

UNIQUE among the city's smaller universities is the economics and government school. Its courses lead to bachelor of arts and science degrees, and closely approximate a major in economics or political science at a liberal arts institution. A two-year program, it demands two years of A. B. or B. S. work as an entrance requirement.

National's law school in particular, as well as other departments, draws heavily upon top-notch Government and District bar authorities for part-time service on its faculty of about 40. Included are such men as Dr. Robert C. Smith, personnel head of the Labor Department, and Richmond B. Keech, District corporation counsel. Charles Pergler, a naturalized citizen who was once Czecho-Slovakian Minister to Japan, is dean of the law school.

EVENING school students predominate in the enrollment, although both day and night courses are offered. The majority of National students come from Government ranks. Tuition varies with programs and courses, but averages around $180 a year.

For the autumn of 1941, with the Nation's interest focused on national defense, the university is offering a new course in military law, and a new department, headed by Dr. Smith, in public administration, covering such topics as purchasing and procurement techniques.



NATIONAL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

ONCE housed in the old Salmon P. Chase house at 601 E Street Northwest, National, for the past 50 years, has been located in three adjoining buildings at 816-820 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

Almost as proud of its crack flying club as it is of faculty and curriculum, National is one of two local colleges with C. A. A.-sponsored aviation training programs. The club, with a membership of about 75, has consistently come out on top or close to the top in meets with colleges such as Michigan, Purdue and Maryland.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

More Girls Are Being Hired as Messengers

Eighty-two girls between the ages of 18 and 25 have been appointed to messenger jobs in the Federal service here since July 1. Girls have received more messenger appointments within the past 2½ months than they have received in years. During the entire 1941 fiscal year, for example, only 19 girls were appointed messengers here. The year before less than a dozen were appointed. Within the past few weeks several agencies have requested the Civil Service Commission to send them girls to fill messenger jobs. The draft and job opportunities elsewhere have caused an enormous turnover among messengers.

The demand for messengers has been so great that the commission's eligible register has been exhausted. Several hundred young men and women, between the ages of 18 and 25, have been placed in jobs here recently pending the establishment of the new Civil Service register for messengers. Those given the jobs were from among 39,000 who had applied for the messenger test. Those who don't pass the test will be dropped. More than 5000 appointments are expected to be made from the messenger register in its first year of operation.

Census Bureau will hand dismissal notices tomorrow to several hundred temporary employes in its machine tabulation and manufacturing divisions. However, most of the separated employes will be given jobs in other Census divisions that are expanding under the pressure of defense work. The employes must pass examinations before they will be accepted for the defense divisions. No one from the outside is being hired. Census has reduced its temporary employes to 5600 from a high on January 1 of 10,000

Other Federal News

Twenty Foreign Broadcast Monitoring Service employes who are being transferred to Portland, Oreg., won't be paid from September 25 to October 1, the days when they'll be in transit . . . Lieut. Col. Roy Lord has been appointed assistant to Milo Perkins, executive director of Economic Warfare. He was assistant director of War's public relations . . . Civil Service plans to get additional space in its main building at Seventh and F Streets by remodeling the third floor, where Lincoln's second inaugural ball was staged. James E. Miller, an architectural examiner, has been appointed to take care of the commission's space needs . . . Wayne Coy, OEM liaison officer, and other defense officials will speak at a dinner meeting Thursday of the Society for the Advancement of Management at the Cosmos Club.

The lowly tabulating machine operator is now finding his services in as great demand as those of a naval architect. Civil Service Commission admits that it can't supply the huge demand for tabulating machine operators. Operators are in great need at the War Department and the Bituminous Coal Division here, and the Social Security Board in Baltimore. Civil Service announced a test for four grades of machine operators in June. To date, only 1200 have applied and of that number very few have accepted jobs here.

Another critical need is for several different types of inspector. Civil Aeronautics Administration, for example, wants to hire immediately at least 50 aeronautical operations, air carrier, and air carrier maintenance inspectors. The jobs pay from $2900 to $3500. Civil Service exams are open for the jobs. Appointees will be given training both here and in the field before being given permanent assignments.

War Department needs more than 300 inspectors of ordnance materials. These positions pay from $1620 to $2600 to start. Persons with experience in the inspection of metals, machine parts, forgings, castings and other ordnance materials can qualify for Civil Service tests.

Boy, 7, Found Injured in Street

Found lying on the sidewalk at Thirteenth and U Streets Northwest yesterday, a 7-year-old Negro youth was treated for a cerebral concussion and abrasions to the face at Children's Hospital.

Police and hospital authorities said they were at a loss to explain the child's injuries. He was brought in by two passersby who found the boy in a semiconscious condition. He was listed at the hospital as James Alvin Jackson, 1339 Q Street Northwest.

Uninvited Guest

Herbert W. Reichelt, Mount Rainier lawyer, yesterday found a strange woman asleep in bed at his parents' home, 3100 Cedar Street. The 40-year-old woman, housekeeper for a Mount Rainier resident, refused to leave. Reichelt called police, who charged the woman with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The elder Reichelts were not home.

There Went the Reels

Goldsboro, N. C., Sept. 21 (AP).—"The baby has swallowed the pacifier," screamed a frantic young mother. To a neighbor the cry came, "the house is on fire," and forthwith she summoned the fire department. Two pump trucks, the hook and ladder truck and 15 firemen dashed up.

P. S.—The pacifier was found—unswallowed.

Elder Michaux Baptizes 200 in Ball Park Ceremonies

25,000 at Stadium Join in; Fireworks Startle Some in City

By Charles Mercer

Elder Lightfoot Michaux met Hitler in Griffith Stadium last night and proved to the satisfaction of more than 25,000 persons that the dictator has no chance of victory.

Victory—"V for victory"—belongs to the conquered countries of Europe with their "spirit of Christianity," said the Elder.

He said it in words, and his chorus of 156 voices swung it in music—religious music with a bit of boogie-woogie thrown in. Crashing fireworks and a mass baptism of nearly 200 converts in an improvised tank at home plate made the Elder's victory complete.

Fireworks Alarm City

Some citizens who heard the fireworks misunderstood. Newspapers, police and the fire department were deluged with calls. One woman wanted to know if the Duke and Duchess of Windsor had arrived. Another wondered if the city were being bombed. But it was only the Elder and his fireworks.

Representatives of the diplomatic staffs of the conquered countries were guests. They were applauded and cheered by an enthusiastic audience whipped into a democratic frenzy by the elder and his choir.

A member of the Michaux church told the audience that the elder inaugurated the "V for Victory" slogan of the British away back before Munich when he recorded a song of that title for the British Broadcasting System.

Then the elder took the spotlight. "This war will be won by Christianity," he shouted.

The audience roared its appreciation.

"Pilgrims!" cried the Elder.

Yea!" roared the choir.

"The Mighty King!"

"Yea!"

"Has never lost a battle, pilgrims!"

"Yea, man."

And they were off again, chanting for victory. The rhythm became almost primitive, then swerved into straight swing before catching up with formal religious music on "The Old Rugged Cross."

The Elder and his deacons descended into the baptistry as the converts shuffled across the field in the glare of a spotlight. The first woman baptized emerged screaming from the tank:

"Glory, glory, we're all saved."

Mormons Discuss Welfare Work at Conference Here

Aspects of the Mormon Church's security and welfare plan were discussed yesterday, as Elder Joseph Smith, member of the Church's Quorum of Twelve Apostles, led a quarterly conference at the Washington Chapel, Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest.

Elder Smith, president of the Utah Genealogical Society, arrived in Washington after having attended another Mormon conference in New York City with Mrs. Smith, a noted contralto. She has made several concert tours and is a member of the famous Salt Lake Tabernacle choir that broadcasts over a national hookup.

The Washington Ward of the Mormon Stake (Diocese) of Zion last week was divided into two wards, with a new division—the Capitol Ward—made in the section south of Michigan Avenue and east of Sixth Street Northwest. J. Ellis Overlade is Bishop of the new ward. The Stake of Zion covers Washington, Chevy Chase and Arlington Wards.

Church Dinner

A roast beef dinner under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Takoma Park Baptist Church, Piney Branch Road and Aspen Street northwest, will be held Thursday from 5 until 7 p. m. in the church hall.

Woodridge Awarded Club Prize in Rose Show Here

The Woodridge Garden Club, of Washington, and Mrs. Lomax Tayloe, of Vienna, Va., were awarded the club and individual sweepstake awards at the Potomac Rose Society exhibit yesterday, as an estimated 6000 visitors viewed the roses from all over the country which were on display at the National Museum.

Opened to the public yesterday afternoon and evening, the show climaxed the two-day convention of the American Rose Society held here Friday and Saturday and the Pan American Rose Society conference held last week. Blossoms from the Pacific Coast were flown to Washington for the exhibit, but local roses dominated the award list.

Two Bowls Awarded

Mrs. Tayloe, in addition to the sweepstakes silver medal, received the Nicholson Bowl, for the American Rose Society member winning the most specimen class blue ribbons in the amateur division, and the Ruffner Bowl, for the member of the Potomac Rose Society achieving the same distinction.

The Woodridge Club point total was boosted by members A. P. Hofmann and A. G. Davis, who had the first and second best roses in the show and tenth and third high point totals, respectively. The prizes were awarded last night at the exhibit by Dr. J. A. Gamble, chairman of the show.

Awards Listed

Copies of "Roses of the World in Color," by Dr. J. Horace McFarland, provided by Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, awarded to each of the following garden clubs: First, Woodridge Garden Club; second, Fairfax Garden Club; third, Takoma Horticultural Society; fourth, Chevy Chase (Md.) Garden Club; fifth, Dolly Madison Garden Club; sixth, Lancaster Garden Club.

Beginners' Classes — First prize, three rose bushes, Mrs. H. Nelson Bass; second prize, two rose bushes, F. W. Tracey; third prize, one rose bush, R. E. Scammell.

Nicholson Bowl—Awarded to Mrs. Lomax Tayloe for the member of the American Rose Society winning the most blue ribbons in specimen classes in the amateur division.

Ruffner Bowl—Awarded to Mrs. Lomax Tayloe for the member of the Potomac Rose Society having the most points in the amateur division.

Three Best Roses in Amateur Division—Special prize cards bearing the seal of the Potomac Rose Society awarded to: First, A. P. Hofmann; second, A. G. Davis; third, Mrs. Eugene Scott.

The 25 Highest Point Winners, Amateur Division—First, Mrs. Lomax Tayloe; second, A. R. Hester; third, A. G. Davis; fourth, F. W. Tracey; fifth, Mrs. J. A. Gamble; sixth, Mrs. William Dutton; seventh, C. E. Ross; eighth, Mrs. S. Hazen Bond; ninth, Frank S. Pohanka; tenth, A. P. Hofmann; eleventh, Mrs. Jon O. Johnson; twelfth, Mrs. Eugene Scott; thirteenth, W. T. Simmons; fourteenth, Miss Louise Penby; fifteenth, Miss E. M. Chamberlin; sixteenth, Mrs. K. F. Fleming; seventeenth, Mrs. H. C. Albin; eighteenth, Mrs. F. P. Wilcox; nineteenth, Mrs. Clyde F. Clark; twentieth, Mrs. John Hauber; twenty-first, W. J. McCarthy; twenty-second, George T. Dunlap; twenty-third, Mrs. Benedicta Regenstein; twenty-fourth, Mrs. Arthur H. Jones; twenty-fifth, Mrs. E. L. Morrison.

A. Gude Sons Co. Award—William J. McCarthy, highest points for Red Radiance.

Novelty Roses, Disseminated 1936 or Later—First, A. R. Hester, $5 worth of rose bushes; second, Mrs. L. P. Tayloe, $3 worth of rose bushes; third, Miss Louise Penby, $2 worth of rose bushes.

Arrangements—Mrs. William S. Dutton, first.

Washington Florists' Club Silver Vase—George C. Shaffer.

Mrs. Charles Pickett Award—Prize of $5 in value for the best specimen of Mme. Butterfly, Mrs. Eugene Scott.

Policeman's Arraignment Set for Today

Arnold F. Jackson, 28, one of three First Precinct patrolmen suspended Saturday, will be arraigned before United States Attorney Edward M. Curran this morning. The policeman was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon after a prisoner told a story of being fired at through the bars of his cell in the First Precinct Station more than a month ago.

Held under a $10,000 bond, Jackson was transferred last night from the First to the Eleventh Precinct Station. Curran, who conferred with Maj. Edward J. Kelly before the suspensions Saturday, said the case probably would go before the grand jury, perhaps today.

The prisoner who made the charge against Jackson was Roland J. Lindsey, 19, under indictment on charges of raping an 18-year-old white girl in northeast Washington, and assault on with intent to kill her soldier escort.

Traffic Kills 2, Injures 15 In D. C. Area

Two persons were killed and 15 were injured in traffic accidents within the metropolitan area yesterday.

Edward C. Kirby, 55, of Burtonsville, Md., was fatally injured when struck by an auto on Route 1 while crossing the road in Berwyn, Md. Police charged the driver, Robert W. Simmons, Hyattsville, with manslaughter, and released him on a $1000 bond, to appear for a hearing October 6 before Judge Walter Greene in Hyattsville.

The second traffic victim was identified as Edgar Williams, 35, Negro, of 615 Second Street Southwest. He was killed instantly when his car plunged down an embankment and overturned on Central Avenue, three miles above Largo, Md. Three occupants of a second car were injured in the crash.

Two Inquests Set

The injured were John H. Jones, Negro, 29, of the 1100 block of Fifth Street Southeast, Richard Henson, Negro, 219 Virginia Avenue Southeast, and Herbert Jones, Negro, address unknown. John Jones was treated at Providence Hospital for body injuries; Henson was treated for body injuries, and Herbert Jones, Negro, for head injuries, both at Casualty Hospital.

Inquests will be held in the deaths of Horace Johnson, Negro, 59, of 2144 L Street Northwest, who died Friday at Emergency Hospital, and for Mrs. Kate Kelly, 65, of Franklin, Ind., who died Saturday of injuries received August 6.

Thomas Giabille, 29, of 3018 Bladensburg Road Northeast, was injured yesterday when he was stuck by a Capital Transit bus in the 2600 block of Connecticut Avenue Northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for head injuries and possible concussion.

Passenger Injured

John Earl Lucas, Negro, 38, of 154 Adams Street Northwest, a passenger in an automobile involved in a collision at Sixth and Trumbull Streets Northwest, received a lacerated scalp which was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Beulah Smith, 27, of 1317 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, automobile passenger involved in an accident at Fourteenth and I Streets Northwest, received first aid treatment by an Emergency Hospital ambulance physician at the scene.

Col. Konrad Furnbolen, 62, of 2915 Conecticut Avenue Northwest, received a bruised hip and abrasions when struck by an automobile near the Zoo entrance on Connecticut Avenue. He was released from Emergency Hospital.

Harold Rosegarten, 27, of The Bronx, N. Y., passenger in an automobile involved in an accident at Thirteenth and R Streets Northwest, was treated by a private physician for a lacerated left elbow.

Sanford Carrier, 25, of 1508 Ballard Street, Silver Spring, Md., was injured while a passenger in a taxicab which made a sudden stop to avert striking another vehicle pulling away from a curb in the 700 block of H Street Northeast. Carrier was thrown forward in the taxicab. He was taken to Casualty Hospital and treated for mouth injuries and possible dislocation of neck.

Florence Hagganmaker, 19, of 913 Tenth Street Southeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for injuries she received in an accident near Gordon, Md. She was treated for possible internal injuries and admitted.

Iris Henderson, 51, of 3218 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, was struck by an auto driven by Lionel Anderson, 41, of 2920 Twenty-eighth Street Northwest, at Thirty-sixth Street and Woodley Road Northwest. She was treated at Emergency Hospital for a fractured leg and head injuries. Anderson was charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian, and released in the custody of his attorney.

Religious Holidays Begin

Devout Jewry yesterday at sundown bowed solemnly in hushed sanctuaries to begin Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year 5702.

Heads covered by hats or black caps, following Jewish custom, the men, women and children filled synagoges and temples of the city—and even a Protestant church placed at their disposal—for the simple Maariv (evening) rites that prepared them for this morning's more formal greeting of the New Year.

Thirty blasts of the shofar (ram's horn) are to echo through the holy places today, calling the faithful to repent and reflect, for Rosh Hashanah ushers in a ten-day period of penitence to be climaxed in the sacred 24-hour period of Yom Kippur—Day of Atonement. That begins at sundown, September 30.

Note of Brotherhood

Last night's services struck a significant note of interfaith brotherhood, as First Congregational Church, at Tenth and G Streets Northwest turned over its auditorium facilities to the overflow crowd from the Washington Hebrew Temple at 822 Eighth street Northwest.

There's always been a warm feeling between the two congregations, said Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, last night as he emerged from his young people's meeting to greet Rabbi Morton Fierman, religious education director for the Temple, and who conducted the overflow services.

Sixteen years ago, when First Church was condemned as unsafe, Washington Hebrew Temple, then led by the late Rabbi Abram Simon, offered the congregation use of its building. And in October, 1940, the Temple came to First Church's rescue in another emergency. First Church's heating plant wasn't ready. And the church was too cold for worship. So they used the Temple for several Sundays.

Directing the Jewish choir and playing the organ at the overflow rites was Adolf Torovsky, organist—choir director of Epiphany Episcopal Church, on G Street, just three blocks from First Church. The Maariv services were conducted from an improvised Ark of the Covenant set up on the rostrum.

Dinner at Shelter

While principal Reformed services last night were centered at the Washington Hebrew Temple and First Church, orthodox worshipers went to Adas Israel Synagogue, Ohev Sholom Synagogue, Beth Sholom, B'nai Israel, Southeast Hebrew Congregation, Tifereth Israel and other synagogues. Service men's uniforms dotted all congregations.

The Hebrew Travelers' Sheltering Society at 407 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, served a special holiday dinner and conducted Maariv services for wayfarers, and services were conducted for Jewish patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital and for residents of the Hebrew Home for the Aged.

While no sermons were delivered last night in the orthodox congregations, Rabbi Harry Silverstone spoke briefly after the Mariv services at Tifereth Israel Congregation, Fourteenth and Euclid Streets Northwest, lauding President Roosevelt's leadership and criticizing Lindbergh's views.

President Roosevelt, he said, "remains the one beacon of light in this blackout world," and asked that "God may help him in his great task."

"Regardless of what Lindbergh says, we are going to remain standing in defense of our American way of life," declared Rabbi Silverstone later in his message.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, who preached last night before his Washington Hebrew Congregation, is scheduled to speak today at 11:30 a. m. on "All-Out American Judaism." The Temple's overflow crowd today again will be accommodated at First Church. Reformed services last one day and orthodox two days.

About the Two Big Leagues

Jack Doyle, tha Broadway betting man, expressed matters very bluntly the other day even while he apologized for quoting no specific odds on the World Series at this time. "The only thing I can say at this moment," said Doyle, "is that the Yankees will be the favorites over any National League club that gets in the World Series."

POVICH

Doyle was saying plainly that for all the drama being provided by the Dodgers and Cardinals, either of those two teams would be moving into faster company when it meets up with the Yankees. And that has been a suspicion for many years—that the American League plays better ball than the National.

The National League's rebuttal is, of course, that the Yankees have been a team apart from the rest in the American League, and it can point to the farcical margins by which the Yanks have been winning six pennants in the last seven years. The point they make is that the Yanks don't have much to beat in the American League. The first time in the last six years that an American League team other than the Yanks has poked its nose into a World Series, it took a beating from the National League entry.

When Reds Beat the Tigers

The reference is, of course, to the 1940 World Series in which the Reds knocked off the Tigers in seven games, but there are angles about that one to consider. The Tigers were held in no great esteem by the American League despite the fact they had won the pennant. They were, perhaps, the poorest A. L. champion in 20 years, with the worst infield that ever found itself in a World Series. The Reds, in contrast, had made a runaway of the National League race, for the second year, much in the Yankee manner, and were supposed to be one of the truly great National League teams. Yet it took 'em seven games to beat back the Tigers.

How good are the Dodgers and the Cardinals? Good enough to win the pennant, but in a league containing such as the Phillies, who have won only 41 games all season, neither Brooklyn nor St. Louis can approach the winning percentage of the Yanks, who have no such team as the Phils on which to fatten their averages.

There is all sorts of evidence aside from the Yankees' World Series triumph to redden the faces of National League adherents and cast some doubt on the N. L. pitching as well as its batting power. Who is the hero of the Dodgers with his consistent hitting? Dixie Walker. The American League clubs felt no qualms in letting him get out of the league on waivers. Jimmy Wasdell is hitting over .300 for Brooklyn. When last in the American League with the Nats he was hitting a mere .084.

And who is this who has been starring in the box for the Dodgers of late? None other than our old friend Johnny Allen, who the other day pitched 15 scoreless innings against none other than the Cardinals. Yesterday, Allen went the route to beat the Phillies with a five-hit performance. When last seen in the American League, Allen, as the saying goes, couldn't get anybody out. Both the Indians and the Browns quit on him earlier in the season. Yet he seems to find National League hitting much more delightful to contend with. You may draw your own conclusions.

N. L. Games More Exciting

National League ball, however, is nice to watch, perhaps more interesting than American League games. One run is much more important to the National League clubs. In contrast to American League power, N. L. clubs don't know exactly where their next run is coming from, and they attach more importance to the possibilities of getting it. Thus you have more of the hit-and-run play, the bunt, the deep strategy, the base running and more frequent pitcher changes.

National League catchers are always throwing to bases, one of the prettier phases of the game to watch, and N. L. managers raise louder squawks where a run or an extra base is concerned. Altogether it's more exciting baseball than the American League where the strategy is to swing from the heels and try to win a ball game without first tying it up.

How come this difference between American and National League power? Basically, the difference begins to sprout in the scouting systems of the two leagues. As a baseball man who has scouted for teams of both major leagues was relating it to this department recently;

"National League clubs I've worked for will buy rookies that American League managers would fire me for signing. The American League isn't interested in any infielder, for example, who can't hit .300 in the minors. But if he's a good fielder, and can run the bases, National League clubs want him. In their league, he'll do."

Nats Beat A's in 2 Games, Gain 6th Place

Macks Turned Back, 6-5, 6-2, as Griffmen Capture 8th Game Out of Last 9 Starts

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats spent Sunady afternoon beating the Athletics, all afternoon. They won a double-header, and as for the Washington scoring, it was six in one and a half dozen in the other as they beat the A's, 6-5 and 6-2. Eleven thousand fans were very much pleased.

And so the Nats are now in undisputed possession of sixth place, a lodging they had been sharing with the Browns before the twin bill. It is a clear-cut margin of a game and a half for the Nats, what with the Browns getting slapped down at Cleveland during the day.

The Nats encountered some trouble in winning that first game. As late as the ninth inning, they were trailing, 5 to 4, and for seven innings they hadn't made a run off Dick Fowler, a rookie right-hander up from Williamsport, in the Eastern League. But a pair of pinch hitters, Buddy Lewis and Buddy Myer, wrenched the winning runs out of Fowler and one Newman Shirley in the ninth.

Case is Surprised

One of the reasons the Nats had trouble winning that first game was because George Case injected high comedy into the situation by running the bases in reverse. On first when Roger Cramer grounded out to first baseman Bob Johnson on a hit-and-run play, Case made second safely, and then the 11,000 were stunned to see him get up out of the dirt and start back to first. It seems that the A's infielders had confided to Case that Cramer's hit was foul, and Case sort of fell for the trick. He was tagged out between first and second. He was probably very much surprised.

In that second game, it was just a breeze for Early Wynn after a rough first inning in which the A's rocked him for a two-run lead. Thereafter he gave the A's no runs at all, held them to eight hits, and the Nats came along to get the winning runs off Rookie Fred Caliguiri.

It seems the Nats have now won eight of their last nine starts.

It wasn't a very happy state of affairs at the end of eight innings of that first game, however. Ken Chase, with a 4-3 lead going into the ninth, was knocked out of the box on singles by Bob Johnson and Sam Chapman, and Bill Zuber who relieved him was no great success. Despite the fact that Johnson was out at the plate trying to score on a short passed ball, the A's scored two runs—one on Pinch Hiter Dee Miles' triple to deep left and another run when Zuber cut loose with a wild pitch.

Score Four Runs

Back in the first inning, the Nats made four runs with the help of a double error by Shortstop Al Brancanto who, with the bases full, first muffed Travis' grounder and then threw it wild past first.

But going into the ninth they still needed a run to tie the score and Bucky Harris wheeled his pinch hitters into action. Buddy Lewis worked the count to three and two and singled to center, and Buddy

Red Birds Score Run in Ninth to Take Opener; Pollet Captures Nightcap

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 21.—The St. Louis Cardinals swept a double header with the Chicago Cubs today and were back in the thick of the National League pennant race as the Brooklyn Dodgers split even in two games with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Winning the opener, 6 to 5, the Cardinals pounded out a 7 to 0 victory in the nightcap to whittle the Dodgers' lead to one game.

A mental lapse by Clyde McCullough, Cubs catcher, gave the Cardinals the winning run with two out in the ninth inning of the opener. With Stanley Musial on second and Frank Crespi on first as the result of a single and an intentional pass, Coaker Triplett hit a little roller in front of the plate.

McCullough fielded the ball but threw too late to first to catch Triplett—then McCullough stood watching the play. Musial continued around third base and sneaked home with the winning run while teh Cub catcher watched Babe Dahlgren start a minor argument with Umpire Lee Ballanfant.

Double Steal Breaks Tie

After taking an early lead, the Cardinals came from behind to tie the score in the seventh inning, Musial's and Crabtree's doubles driving in Walt Sessi to make it 5 to 5. Johnny Hopp and Musial executed a duoble steal in the fifth to break a 3-3 deadlock only to have the Cubs move out in front in the sixth.

Howard Pollet, the rookie from Houston, had little trouble with the Bruins in the second game as his mates went on a 17-hit spree. It was his fifth victory against one defeat. Ernie White started on the mound in the first game but gave way to Ira Hutchinson and Bill Crouch, the latter notching his first victory for the Redbirds since joining the club in June.

Cards Send Four Runs Home

Pollet in gaining his second shutout, gave up eight hits, fanned seven and walked only one.

The Cardinals hit their high spot in the fifth inning of the nightcap, getting six singles which were good for four runs and driving Verne Olsen to the showers. Vallie Eaves and Emil Kush finished the job. Ken Raffensberger was charged with the first game loss.

Musial, the 20-year-old rookie, was the sensation of day both at bat and in the field. He made two sensational catches, and got four hits in five official trips in the first game, driving in two runs and scoring three others.

Pro Eagles Down Steelers By 10-7 Count

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Sept. 21.—A 43-yard place kick by Quarterback Len Barnum, of the Philadelphia Eagles professional football team, in the second quarter and a 27-yard touchdown run by Halfback Lou Tomasetti in the third gave the Eagles a 10-7 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers today.

Pittsburgh scored its touchdown in the third period when both teams put on the pressure. The Steelers went 76 yards on ten plays after receiving the kick-off. The veteran Boyd Brumbaugh took the ball over left guard from the 4-yard line and Jack Sanders added the extra point to put the Steelers ahead 7 to 3.

The Eagles' touchdown was set up by a 37-run of Jim Castiglia who returned the kick-off following Pittsburgh's score. The Eagles covered 50 yards on the four succeeding plays for the touchdown that gave them their first league victory of the season. Philadelphia scored on a lateral from Barnum to San Desantis, who threw a forward pass to Tomasetti.

A first quarter thriller for the 12,893 fans was a booming quick kick by Barnum which zoomed for 64 yards from the line of scrimmage and smacked squarely on the goal line.

In the final period, Barnum tried another field goal again from the 43-yard line but his boot went wide of the goal posts. For the rest of the quarter an uneventful see-saw ensued in which Philadelphia was penalized 5 yards for delaying the Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 21.—The Brooklyn Dodgers staged two drives, each nearly the length of the field, to defeat the Detroit Lions, 14 to 7, today in their opening game of the National Professional Football League season.

A crowd of 19,269 saw the game.

After being held at bay for the first half by the fine kicking of Whizzer White and then seeing their goal line threatened by the Lions nine minutes after the start of the third period, the Dodgers roared back. The passing of Ace Parker, the circuit's most valuable player last year, produced their first touchdown midway of the session.

The Lions, with White, Harry Hopp and Lloyd Cardwell doing the bulk of the work, drove to Brooklyn's 24-yard stripe. Taking too much time cost the Lions five yards and then White's pass was intercepted by Bud Svensen on the 15-yard line. He carried the ball back to the 24 and eight plays and four minutes later the Dodgers had scored, with Pug Manders counting and Merlyn Condit adding the extra point from placement.

76 Yards Covered

With Manders doing the line plunging and Parker the passing to Herman, Hodges and Condit, the Dodgers went to Detroit's 35 in seven plays. Parker then heaved a long one to Perry Schwartz, who was tackled by White and Hopp on the 20. As he went down, however, he lateraled the ball to Manders, who broke away for the remainder of the distance. The entire march covered 76 yards.

The third period was nearing an end when the Dodgers started their second drive from their ten after being driven back by Bill Jefferson's 73-yard quick kick. This march took a little longer, but it got the same results early in the initial quarter. Brooklyn had the ball on its 44 when the third ended as the result of Parker's passes and runs.

Then Bill Leckonby and Eddie Ruciński took over with some line cracking by George Kracum. The pay-off was an 18-yard pass from Leckonby to Ruckinski, with the latter breaking in the clear to take Milwaukee, Sept. 21.—The Green Bay Packers, held in check for two periods by a stubborn Cleveland football team, turned on the power in the first and fourth quarters to crush the Rams in a National Professional League football game today before 20,000 by a score of 24 to 7.

The Packers scored on a pass in the first quarter and then were held in check by a hard fighting Cleveland team until the final period when they used quick opening plays and end runs to march down the field for another score, again connecting on a pass for the marker. Later in the fourth period they scored after a pass interception, with young Tony Canadeo, a pro league freshman, circling right end for the count.

Rams Score on Pass

Cleveland scored late in the game on a 48-yard pass from Marty Slovak to Johnny Drake. Adams kicked for the extra point. The only other Cleveland threat was in the second period when a great 75-yard punt by Gaylon Smith, of the Rams, was downed on the Packer three-yard line. The Packers punted out and Smith ran it back to the 11. The Rams advanced to the Packer four only to lose on downs when the Bay line held.

The Packers' first score came after a march of 42 yards. Green

McCarney also said he had wired a request to promoters in Chicago to defer for a week the Dorazio-Booker Beckwith 10-round bout scheduled for October 15.

Bing Crosby Sees His Horse Win In Buenos Aires

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Sept. 21.—Bing Crosby, movie and radio star from the United States, watched Blackie, ace of his Binglin Stock Farm string in Argentina, score an important victory today in the classic "seleccion" race at Palermo.

Blackie, winning by a length over La Cave with Scableuse third, took a prize of 30,000 pesos (about $7500). She paid 3.80 pesos on each two peso mutuel ticket.

The favorite, given a good ride by Elias Antunez, came from behind to win the 2200-meter event for 3-year-old fillies in two minutes 19-1-5 seconds. It was the second important triumph for Blackie, which captured the fillies derby July 27.

Snead Rallies, Captures $7500 Hurst Tourney

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—Hillbilly Sam Snead's irons were as true as his grandpappy's squirrel rifle today as he spread-eagled the field in the $7500 Hurst Invitation Golf Tournament to win by nine strokes—widest margin of victory in a major tournament this year.

The slammer from Hot Springs, Va., who fired a record-breaking 64 in the first round and then slipped to a 74 in the second, slugged out a sparkling 69-65 in today's 36-hole final for an eight-under-par 72-hole total of 272.

Hogan's Streak Ended

The triumph was worth $1500 to Snead and pushed his 1941 tournament winnings to $11,496, second only to Benny Hogan, the year's leading money winner from Hershey, Pa.

Hogan's streak of finishing in the money in 56 consecutive tournaments was broken when he stumbled around the Torresdale-Frankford Country Club's course in 291

Handsome Dick Metz, of Chicago, Ill., fired a final round 69-68 to take second place with 291. The victory gave him $1000.

Jimmy Demaret, the transplanted Texan from Noroton, Conn., found his game on the last 18 holes shooting a 65 to match Snead, and won third place and $750 with 292.

National P. G. A. Champion Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., who put together a 69-72, and Clayton Heafner of Linville, N. C., 72-70, tied for fourth place at 284 and won $425 each.

Bracketed at 285 and winners of $160 each were Gene Sarazen, former British and American open champion from East Brookfield, Conn., two former National open kings, Byron Nelson of Toledo, Ohio, and Billy Kurke, of Cleveland, Ohio, Horton Smith of Pine Hurst, N. C., and Terl Johnson, of Philadelphia.

Cruikshank Has a 286

Bobby Cruikshank of Richmond, Va., and Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio, tied at 286 and collected $100 each.

Craig Wood, current National open monarch from Mamaroneck, N. Y., shared the 287 slot with Charles Schneider, of Concordville, Va., and Herman Keiser, of Akron, Ohio, Sam Byrd, of Merion, Pa., the former professional baseball player, bogged down to a 288.

National Amateur Champion Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., led the play-for-fun contingent with a gaudy 296.

Winning the Hurst gave Snead his seventh tournament triumph of the year—his first since the Rochester open in August—and boosted his Vardon point rating to 404, second to Hogan's 494.

Slammin' Sam's putter was behaving. He clicked off 10 birdies along the 36-hole route, six of them on the last 18.

Two Homers Beat Leaders in Nightcap; Brooklyn's Threats Checked by Pearson

By Ted Meier
Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—A couple of home runs pitches at Shibe Park today stopped—at least temporarily—Brooklyn's mad dash towards the National League pennant.

The pitches were served up to Danny Litwhiler and Nick Etten of the Phillies in the second game of a double-header and enabled the last place Phils to gain an even split with the league-leading Flatbush Flock.

The scores of the twin-bill, played before 35,909—the largest crowd in history to see a National League game in Philadelphia—were Brooklyn, 8; Phils, 3; in the opener and the Phils, 6; Brooklyn, 3; in the nightcap. An estimated 15,000 Brooklyn fans, who came by train, airplane, bus and hitchhiked, were in the stands.

Homer Wrecks Dodgers

Litwhiler's smack off Luke Hamlin with the bases full in the first inning of the second game was the blow that really defeated the Dodgers. Etten's round-tripper with one on in the sixth came after Brooklyn had regained three runs and with Tom Drake on the mound.

Fighting to make it four straight over the Phils, the Dodgers drove starting pitcher Tom Hughes to the showers in the seventh, but brilliant relief pitching by Ike Pearson cut short their threats in the seventh and eighth, the Brooks leaving four men stranded in those two innings. In the ninth, Brooklyn went down in order.

Making his first start since pitching 15 scoreless innings in that historic 17 inning battle at Cincinnati Johnny Allen had an easy time chalking up his third victory in the opener.

Allen gave up only five hits—two of them homers by Ben Warren and Joe Marty, while the Phils' other tally resulted from a two-base error by Dixie Walker. Allen did not issue a base on balls and retired the Phils in order in the first, third, fourth, sixth and eighth innings.

Dodgers Shell Hurler

Meantime, the Dodgers slammed Johnny Podgajny around for five runs in the first five innings and added three more off his successor, Si Johnson on Mickey Owen's homer in the sixth and Dolph Camilli's thirty-fourth circuit blast of the year with one on in the ninth.

Pete Reiser and Camilli together drove in seven of the Dodgers' runs in the opener. Reiser knocked in four with a long fly in the first inning, a triple with two on in the

Pounds Runs Amuck

Colorado Springs, Colo.

Dear Boss,

The big hand on the clock showed less than a minute to go and the scoreboard read: Bears 6; Redskins 0. We were backed up on our five-yard line. It was last down for the Bears. Bill Osmanski drove into the left side of the line and Willie Wilkin crushed him to the ground. It was the Redskins' ball on the 3-yard line. We had held them right on the brink of the goal—and I slid over a little on the bench so I could get a better view.

HAIGHT

Coach Flaherty came running up to me. He looked as though he was going to put me into a game at last. The only thing he had used me for before was to bend over so he could see to comb his hair, using the seat of my pants for a mirror.

"Haight, I want you to go in there now. Tell Baugh to call that touchdown play of yours," snapped the coach.

Well, Boss, I didn't even warm up. I bounced to my feet grabbed my headgear, waved assuringly to the Redskin rooters and ran on the field. "Haight for Farkas," I told the referee, and then we went into a huddle.

I don't like to bring this up, Boss, but I just want to show how cool and collected I was. While Baugh was explaining my play to those dumb college graduates, I pulled out my dice and won 35 cents from Bob McChesney.

Well, I had my plans all mapped out. I got back in punt formation behind the goal line, but to tell the truth, Boss, I was only kidding. I couldn't even kick off a bedroom slipper. Ki Aldich snapped the ball back to me: I tucked it under my arm and yelled, "Let's go!"

Now listen, Boss, I don't like to talk about the other Redskins, but their blocking was terrible. Not that I needed any blocking, Boss, but when I supplant Flaherty as coach of this team, the players will have to brush up on that phase of the game.

I started through the right side of the Bears' line. I really had no business going into Sidahar's territory like that but I never

Nine Rookies Retained as Redskins Cut Squad to 34 Players

Release of Guard Parks Is Surprise

Sanford and Morgan Also Cut; Krueger Added Backfield Man; 'Skins Head East

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

McCook, Nebr., Sept. 21.—Without further ado, here's the personnel of your 1941 Redskins:

ENDS—Bob McChesney, Wayne Millner, Bob Masterson, Ed Cifers, Frank Clair, Joe Aguirre.
TACKLES—Willie Wilkin, Jim Barber, Fred Davis, Bill Young, Jim Stuart.
GUARDS—Dick Farman, Steve Slivinski, Clem Stralka, Clyde Shugart, Vic Carroll.
CENTERS—Ki Aldrich, George Smith, Bob Titchenal.

Here's what becomes of the other members of the squad of 46 which reported for training at San Diego:

Steve Andrako—He is still with the club but, from observation, it appears he will not stick. Coach Flaherty will carry only three centers. However, the former Ohio State star seems sure to get a job in the league.

Lee Gentry, Sam Goldman, Sandy Sanford—Remain property of Redskins, but will be farmed out to Long Island Indians of American Association with 24 hour recall attached.

Mickey Parks, Jim Bryant, John Stonebraker, Jack Guthrie—Sent to Hollywood (Calif.) Bears with no strings attached.

Red Morgan, Dick Meyers, Truck Tornell, Ed Hiestand—Released outright.

Coach Ray Flaherty sprang two major surprises in cutting the squad down to 34. Despite the fact that he was noticeably slower than last year, it was believed that Mickey Parks would stay. However, with five veteran guards, the Redskin coach discarded him in favor of an extra back.

Krueger Added Back

The added backfield man is Al Krueger, from Southern California. The blonde boy, who caught two victory passes in Rose Bowl games, has shown some backfield ability and will be tried. If found wanting, Lee Gentry will be recalled.

The writing seemed to have been on the wall for Red Morgan throughout the training period. He made a good showing against the Pacific Coast All-Stars in Los Angeles, but he failed to improve his fault of poor pass defense.

The regulars as well as Redskin fans will miss Sandy Sanford, one of the finest fellows on the team. The Alabama boy gave the other ends a stiff battle, even shining in last night's intra-squad game, but the fact that he has been brittle led to his being farmed.

The Redskins will swing into action against the Giants next Sunday with 13 backs and 19 linemen. Eleven new faces will be on the squad, nine rookies, plus Ki Aldrich and George Smith, the latter returning to the team after having helped win the league championship in 1937.

Not in Best Shape

Frank Filchock and Ed Justice suffered badly bruised shoulders last night and Rookie Jack Banta injured his left arm. Bob Titchenal is on his feet after an attack of tonsilitis, but Wilbur Moore, with the same complaint, is confined to his berth.

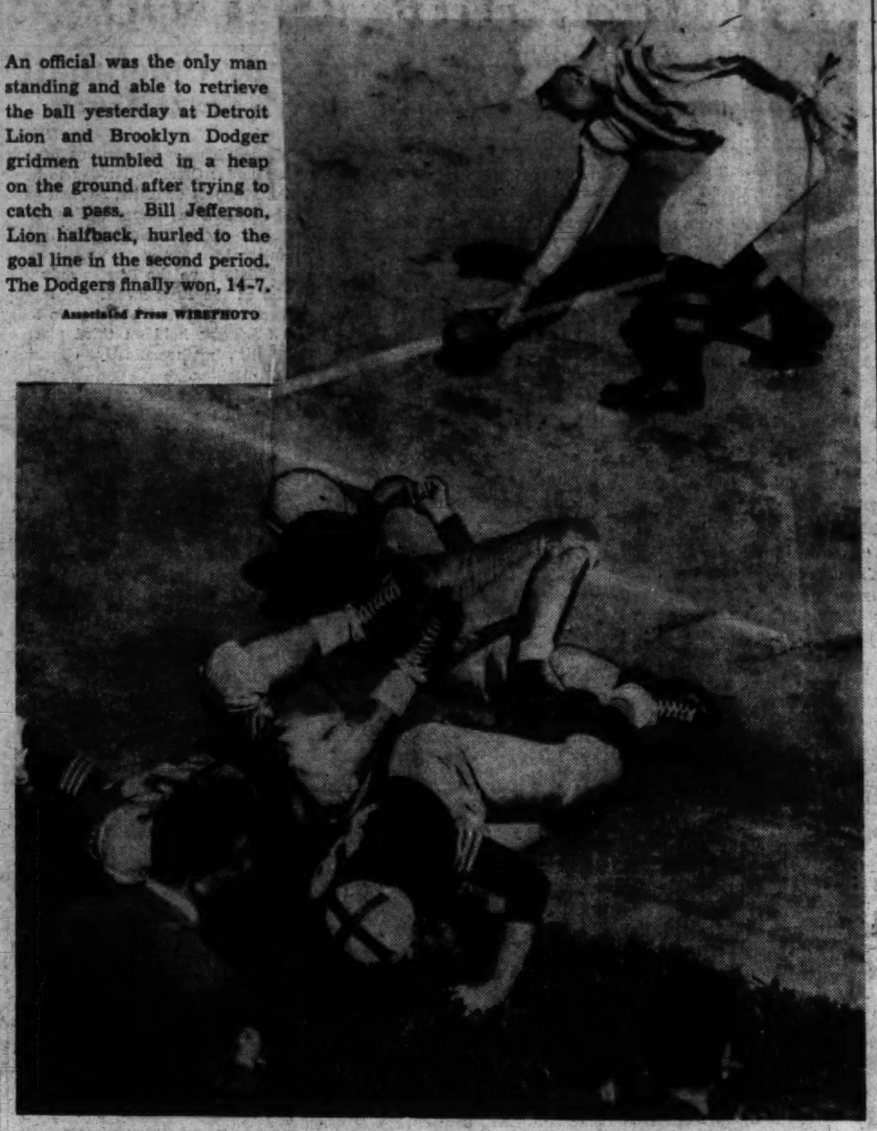
The Redskins practice tomorrow at Soldiers Field in Chicago and then lunch at Illinois A. C. before boarding the Capital Limited for Washington, where they are due to arrive at 7:40 a. m. Tuesday.

Pa. Speedway Fan Killed in Crash

Sharon, Pa., Sept. 21 (AP).—One spectator was killed and two injured during automobile races at Sharon Speedway today when a car skidded on a turn and crashed through a guard fence.

Lyle Myers, 18, Warren, Ohio, was fatally injured; George Lump, 29, Sharon, suffered a fractured pelvis; and Donald Stevenson, 21, Warren, Ohio, was treated for slight injuries.

Pro Gridmen Give Their All—But Miss Pass



An official was the only man standing and able to retrieve the ball yesterday at Detroit Lion and Brooklyn Dodger gridmen tumbled in a heap on the ground after trying to catch a pass. Bill Jefferson, Lion halfback, hurled to the goal line in the second period. The Dodgers finally won, 14-7.

Cabot Feldman, Dr. H. L. Smith Win Club Qualifying Medals

Mrs. Emge Regains Beaver Dam Title; Cooper Is Upset

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

CONGRESSIONAL

Dr. Smith's round of 41-36, 77, five over par, was a surprisingly high score to win the Congressional qualifying medal. Gene Pittman, a former champion, had 41-37, 78, to tie with the defending titlist and District Championship finalist, M. Parker Nolan, who had a pair of 39s for 78 and John Agur, with 40-38, 78.

Pairings will be announced later in the week. The first round of match play is scheduled next Saturday, following the Calcutta pool drawing.

WOODMONT

Cabot Feldman's 76, seven over par figures, was the lowest posted in Woodmont's medal round. Many-time champion Howard Nordlinger was safely in the qualifying fold for the first round of match play next weekend.

Maryland U.'s boxing coach, Bobby Goldstein, won another sweepstakes tournament, this time with 82-18, 64, while other Class A victors were Mr. Max Hurston, 84-19, 65; Ellis Edlowitz, 78-12, 66; Ed Wortman, 79-13, 66, and Feldman, 76-10, 66.

Class B winners were Milton Gladstein, 96-28, 68 and Ellis Block, 93-24, 69.

Championship Flight

Cabot Feldman (76) vs. Jules Winkleman (82); Howard Nordlinger (78) vs. Barney Krukoff (84); Buddy Brylawski (77) vs. Dr. Max Hurston (84); Milton Harris (80) vs. Bernie Wilner (85); Ed Wortman (77) vs. Willard Goldheim (82); L. E. Harris (79) vs. Al Goldstein (85); Jerry Goodman (78) vs. Robert Phillipson (84); Malcolm Mintz (82) vs. Greeny Fischer (86).

Second Flight

BEAVER DAM

Mrs. Ora Emge, 1937 champion and 1938 finalist in the women's title play at Bever Dam, regained the title with a 5 and 3 triumph over Mrs. C. T. Frownfelter.

Mrs. Bessie Taylor won the second flight over Mrs. John Remey, 2 and 1; Mrs. Ben Dyer the third over Mrs. Ralph Kelly, 6 and 4, and Mrs. J. Woodside the fourth over Mrs. Doug Mattison, 2 and 1.

Bob Thompson was the sweepstakes winner with a 77 while Dr. L. Levine had low net, 82-11, 71.

MANOR

Earl McAleer southpawed his way into the semifinals of the Manor Club championship, a round ahead of the field, with a pair of near-par rounds of golf which accounted for W. J. Peters in the first round and H. L. Lacey in the second.

The major first round upset was William Baker's 4-and-3 triumph over Art Cross.

Nanette Takes Bridle Trails' Show Crown

By Anne Hagner

Turning back strong bids from Eddie Talbert's Good Friday and Betty McGowan's Peremiah, Charles Fletcher's Nanette earned 13 points to win the championship of the privately owned division at the Washington Bridle Trails Association's final horse show yesterday on the Rock Creek Park equitation field.

Edgewater Stable's Lady Bee took the title among the riding academy mounts, but her victory was a foregone conclusion to the 600 spectators that crowded the ringside, for the mare had already totaled 13 points in the association's earlier show to lead her nearest rival by five markers.

Nanette, chestnut 5-year-old daughter of Mainmast, won her tricolor only after Owner Fletcher had some uneasy moments. In the closing events of the show, Jeremiah made an unexpected challenge by winning two successive classes, privately owned hacks and "bet-you-can't-do-it" jumping.

Put on Even Terms

Added to the two points she won in the June show, these blues put her on even terms with Good Friday, who had placed second to Nanette among the privately owned jumpers, and also was runner-up in the "bet you can't do it." It was in the final event that Talbert expected to make his strongest bid for honors for the touch course was the type that Good Friday ordinarily finds just to his liking. However, the good bay apparently was annoyed by a pursuit around the ring by his owner's Dalmation dog, Bender, and knocked down two poles, thus placing second, following Jeremiah's clean performance.

With no blue ribbons to his credit, Talbert found that both Good Friday and Miss McGowan's mare were one point behind Nanette, whose owner carried home a large silver bowl for his victory.

Red Tom Scores

With Lady Bee's victory march somewhat shortened in the late stages, other riding academy horses came into their own as Meadowbrook's good-looking chestnut, Red Tom, won the walk-trot-canter event with Richard Weeks aboard and Lady Bee's stablemate, King Fish, another Edgewater entry, took the jumping class, ridden by Norman S. Jones.

Second to the Meadowbrook mount in the hack event was Virginia Graveley on Potomac Riding School's Duchess, with Greystone, from the same stable, third and Pegasus Stable's High Hat fourth.

Among the jumpers, Greystone was second to Kingfish, with Potomac's Mainspring and Edgewater's Lady Bee in third and fourth places.

World Mark Set by Ohio Speedboater

By the Associated Press

New Martinsville, W. Va., Sept. 21.—Joe Taggart, Canton, Ohio, boating enthusiast, skimmed over a 2.5-mile straightaway of the Ohio River at 73.170 miles per hour today to set a new world record and capture the main event of the fourth annual Ohio River Regatta.

Taggart, driving a creamy white hydroplane-type power boat in the 225-cubic-inch displacement class, won both the Hearst Trophy and the Magnolia Yacht Club Cup in the 15-mile event.

He finished six lengths ahead of Jack Cooper, of Kansas City, who set the previous world record in this classification at Lakeland, Fla., February 4, 1940, by driving 70.810 miles an hour.

Grid Substitute Is Messenger For the Stork

By International News Service

The 1941 rules permit an in-coming substitute to immediately communicate with players in the game. But when John Mason, Mines coach, sent in a sub yesterday in the Colorado Mines-Regis game, it wasn't a bit of strategy from the bench. It was a personal message to Harry Campbell, Mines halfback from Glendale, Calif.

The sub told Campbell:

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

WHAT's ON YOUR MIND, BUDDY?

THEM BUMS?—They're in, of course. The Dodgers won it on the greatest Western trip in memory. What they are doing now is mopping up; making it official. But the verdict probably won't come until about Friday. There might be a little beer consumed in Brooklyn that night.

CONSIDINE

We don't remember a team which scored its victories in a more nerve wracking manner or fought harder or more often than the Dodgers. But when the final story of the 1941 pennant race is written, a prominent chapter should be devoted to the astonishing team-wide slump of the Cardinals, just at the crucial moment when they were playing in their own backyard. Over the past 18 games, leading up to yesterday, the Cards had barely played .500 ball. They had won nine, lost eight and tied one. The club, which for a long time looked like another Yankee type of powerhouse, hit .200 over the same critical period. Johnny Hopp, who was on his way to the National League batting title, dropped to .309. Johnny Mize, who played 16 of the 18 games referred to, drove in only five runs in those games, two of them in one day. That slump was the final straw in a season of crummy breaks for the Cards.

And while we're speaking of the Dodgers, get a load of this:

"Dear Sir: I heard you speaking on WNEW last night on the subject of impartial galleries," writes John D. Abbott of 509 Fifth Avenue, "but wouldn't it be nice if you got rid of some of that Dodger favoritism?

"Why refer to a winning Dodger game as 'good news' and a defeat as a tragedy . . . Brooklyn represents only a small part of New York sports fans who read the papers and listen to the radio. Give your pets an honest break but don't make heroes or martyrs out of a hoodlum ball team that could only be palmed off on a hick community like Brooklyn.

"There is no legitimate excuse for the existence of the Dodgers and it is only a matter of time before they will be disbanded. Two ball clubs are enough for New York. Hoping 'bad news,' I am very truly yours . . ."

(Ed. note.—No you're not.)

THE FIGHT?—Well, it develops that Jim Braddock didn't exactly pick Nova. At least there was an "iffy" clause in there. What Jim said after watching Lou work the other day was, "Nova's a lot better fighter than he appears to be. He moves around well, knows how to box, can take a punch on the chin, and hits fast and accurately with either hand. Physically he's a match for Louis.

"What I like about him is his confidence. Nova won't be licked before he gets in that ring—like a lot of the guys Joe fought. He thinks he's one of those men of destiny. I honestly never saw a fighter as confident of winning a fight as Nova is. It all helps. But the fight is tough to figure.

"Louis has slipped, but he can still punch. That makes things hard to dope, but I got a hunch that Louis will have to win in the early rounds. If he can't put Nova away, say, in five or six heats, then I like Nova to win. Joe gets tired in the late rounds.

"That Yoga stuff? I dunno. Maybe there's something in it, but I still would rather take my chances on a good belt on the lug."

RACING?—Whirlaway's victory in the Lawrence Realization reminded Clem McCarthy of the day Man o' War won it, 21 years before, with several important changes. Whirly was 1-to-5 in the betting and won by 10 lengths. The day Man o' War went to the post in the Realization he was tagged a 1-to-100. He faced, if we recall correctly, only one other horse in the race and won by so great a distance that many of the experts on hand computed it in parts of a mile, instead of in lengths. Whirlaway's winning time was 2:44 1-5. Man o' War set the record of 2:40 4-5 in this mile and five-eighths race.

Homers Beat Yanks, 4 to 1, For Red Sox

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 21.—The Boston Red Sox stole the New York Yankees' thunder today by blasting three homers which accounted for all their runs as they won, 4 to 1.

The victory clinched Boston's possession of second place as the White Sox dropped one game and battled to a 14-inning deadlock in the second of a double bill with Detroit while Cleveland split with the Browns.

Williams' circuit blow, his thirty-sixth of the year, came after Manager Joe Cronin had tripled and boosted to 118 his runs-batted-in total. This makes him tied with Joe DiMaggio in this department; four behind the injured Charley Keller of the Yankees.

Indian Spring Golfers Gain Team Finals

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 21.—Roger Peacock, with a 31-36-67, three under par, led the invading Indian Spring forces to a victory, 11½ to 6½ over the Country Club of Maryland on the Towson course yesterday in the Maryland State team semifinals.

Playing with Buddy Sharkey against Otto Greiner and Bob Sulzer, the Washington District pair managed to get only half the three points, for Greiner himself had a 71, and was supported by Sulzer at the right times.

In the top match, however, Mel Shorey, Indian Spring pro, and Jimmy Huntt managed to win all three from Johnny Flattery, host professional, and Stuart Windsor, Eddie Ault and Jock Olmsted also managed to take three points from Irvin McCourt and John Hospelhorn. These clean sweeps left only two points to be picked up in the other three matches, and that was easy to the sharpshooters from the Capital.

Bonnie View handed Rolling Road a surprise 13-5 defeat to qualify as Indian Spring's final round opponent next Sunday, over a neutral course. Andy Gibson and Lou Gavin, with a best ball 66, won 2½ points from Alec Taylor and Spencer Overton in the feature.

Joe Louis and Lou Nova Tell How They Expect to Win Fight

(Champion Joe Louis and challenger Lou Nova are equally confident that they will win when they fight for the world's heavyweight championship September 29 at the Polo Grounds. Herewith each of them tells in his own way how he expects to triumph.—editor.)

By Joe Louis

(Written Expressly for International News Service.)

Greenwood Lake, N. Y., Sept. 1.—I'm in the greatest shape of my life, and being that way I expect to win from Lou Nova next Monday night.

LOUIS

I can't tell just when I will score the victory, but I'll say that if Nova gives me the opening in the first round that will be it. Or, it will be any round when I get the chance. I'm ready for any kind of a fight Nova cares to put up. Those trick punches that Nova talks about are just a laugh to me. I'm sticking to the old jabs, hooks, crosses and uppercuts. They've always done right by me. If Nova's "cosmic punch" works, I'll be the first to congratulate him on his discovery.

By Lou Nova

(Written Expressly for International News Service.)

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Sept. 21.—I confidently expect to beat Louis, and I honestly believe, by cold reasoning and facing facts, that I have the equipment to do it. I have been conditioning for three months and feel that I have attained the best condition of my career.

NOVA

Now in regard to Louis, I have been watching him box since 1935. I have made a close study of his every move, and as far back as 1937 I have known that I could beat him once I got the chance. Now that I have the chance I am not going to

Lawson Pilots Potlatch to Victory in Penguin Class Regatta

D. C. Owner Compiles 79.7 Points

Penso, Also of D. C., Scores 67.3 Points; Another Washington, Runyon, Is Third

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Sept. 21—Walter Lawson of Washington, at the helm of Potlatch, outsailed the Penguin fleet in the in the Penguin Class Dinghy Association's regatta today and annexed the Annapolis Yacht Club Trophy, emblematic of the national championship.

Lawson increased substantially his narrow lead established in the first three races yesterday, running up a total of 79.7 points in today's final races. His nearest contender was Leonard Penso, also of Washington, who scored 67.3 points with Gadget.

Washington's Charles Runyon, whose Murgaes was only seven-tenths of a point behind Lawson yesterday, dropped to third place with 66.9 points. Fourth award went to Ralph A. Youngs, of Arlington, Va., sailing Seabiscuit.

In Division II, the President's Trophy was captured by Miss Junerose Markusson, of Great Kills, Staten Island, N. Y., who maintained her lead over the lower half of the fleet with 82.6 points. P. T. Chapman's Philadelphia entry, Furious, was second, while the division's third award went to Nat G. Sexton, of Baltimore, at the helm of Zipper.

First Division

FOURTH RACE—Won by Walter Lawson, Washington (Potlatch); second, George A. Dankers, Arlington, Va. (Catabaw); third, Edward J. Miller, Fort Washington, N. Y. (Draftee).

FIFTH RACE—Won by Paul Morris, Seattle, Wash. (Mike Fright); second, J. L. Alger, Jr., Washington (Judy); third, Millre (Draftee).

Second Division

FOURTH RACE—Won by Wirt A. Gill, Washington (Skeptic); second, Nat G. Sexton, Baltimore (Zipper); third, Miss Junerose Markusson, Great Kills, N. J. (Juno).

FIFTH RACE—Won by P. J. Chapman, Philadelphia (Furious); second, Milton Harding, Alexandria, Va. (Milton Harding); third, Mary Ann Shepherd, Easton, Md. (Margo).

Four Corners Wins

Jack Schrider's relief pitching helped the Four Corners A. C. to nose out Acokeek, 3-2, yesterday on the winners' diamond. Schrider went to the aid of Charlie Bell in the sixth inning and struck out seven of nine batters who faced him.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

Although he is eligible for the $15,000 Added Havre de Grace Handicap, to be renewed the final day of the meeting, Market Wise was shipped back to New York following his appearance in the Potomac Handicap. Trainer G. W. Carroll stated that his charge would make his next start in the $10,000 Added Jockey Club Gold Cup, a race over the 2-mile distance. If he shows a creditable race in that stake, he can be regarded as a certain starter in the $50,000 Added New York Handicap, to be contested over the 2¼-mile distance. One of the best sprinters on the grounds changed hands before Saturday's race. The sprinter was none other than the old Bowie favorite, Clyde Tolson.

E. K. Bryson disposed of the 4-year-old to G. R. Watkins for an unannounced sum. Ken McCombs and the Dixiana have severed connections. They performed well here earlier in the week when Night Glow accounted for the feature ¾-mile race. Race Secretary John Turner, sr., distributed condition books for the coming Laurel meeting. The top eligible for the $7,500 Capitol Handicap, at 1 mile, is Joseph E. Widener's Roman, which last Saturday equalled the 6-furlong record at Belmont Park while toting 140 pounds. Maj. Goss L. Stryker, president of the Laurel track, was a visitor Saturday to witness the Potomac Handicap. Jockey George Woolf has announced that he may travel to New York to pilot Woolford Farm's Contradiction in the Futurity trial. Jockey Ted Atkinson, who came down to accept the mount on Boston Man in the Potomac, returned North Saturday night. Jockey Darrell Madden, who escaped serious injury when thrown from Unknown Land during the running of a race Friday, rested up over the weekend and will swing back into action today. One of the larger stables shipping to the coming Laurel meet is that of Anthony Pelleteri and the Millsdale Stable. They are expected to bring about 18 horses down. The E. R. Bradley racers here in charge of Jimmy Smith and those handled in New York by William Hurley will join into one stable at Laurel. The fans at the track Saturday were all attracted to the press box when it was found that a picture of Sam Finkelstein (alias the Tiger) had been posted on the front of the box. All the boys thought it was funny but Tiger came up in a battling mood and changed their minds. Well, our old friend, Walter Haight, will be back this week. It's going to be good to see him, too.

BILL.

First race—INDIAN SUN was a clever winner last out here and a repeater should be a set of brackets for this youngster. ONE LINK was the victim of a weird ride earlier in the meeting and might take it all with more alert handling. VELDINA ZEST also has a good race over this strip.

Second race—HERSHECOMES came from last place to get in the money in that last race. If able to escape trouble while moving, this may be the right one BARRYMORE lost a lot of ground last out and should be a factor. ROUGH MAN got good in New England and might go well.

Third race—INGOMAR has had many a chance, but has always been place a little high. Meets a field here that many mean graduation. LAUDERKIN has trained exceptionally well over this track and may be tough. YELLOW DRAGON has a good sprint race to recommend.

Fourth race—PORT WALES has plenty of early foot and is dead fit, as proved by that good effort in New York. FOGOSO did fairly well the other day and is the logical choice. SLOW MOTION has a touch of class, but has gone back.

Fifth race—ABRASION is one of the best sprinters around these parts and looks like the best bet of the day. HE ROLLS has changed hands and has been training in a clever fashion. ROBESPIERRE'S last can be thrown out.

Sixth race—GONDALINA'S race here the other day was a pip. After getting bumped around at the first turn, he came on to be beaten a whisker. AARON BURR showed a good sprint race and the added distance should help. HAPPY HUNTING is a fair sort.

Seventh Race—If PROC can get off the also eligible list, I see no reason for any mistakes being made. Had no chance with the start last out, but the race before that was very good. CARTEL has two good races over this oval and is the one to beat. TRAMP SHIP has gone away back, but still is a factor.

Eighth race—BAIN MARIE has not started here this meeting and is dead fit. She has a good stable mate so I'll play safe and take the entry. SUN PHANTOM stood in the gate last out and was favorite and may be tough if able to get off. LEGENDA was a good winner last out.

Best bet—ABRASION.

Rigney, Rowe Clash in 1-1, 14-Inning Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Darkness halted a 14-inning 1-1 deadlock between Detroit and Chicago today after the Tigers had captured the first game of a double-header, 6 to 3, before 12,536 spectators.

In the brilliantly-pitched nightcap John Rigney and Schoolboy Rowe each yielded eight hits for the route, both pitching airtight ball with men on bases.

Tommy Bridges bested Ted Lyons in the opener. Three doubles and a single produced Detroit's first two runs and another double after a walk widened the margin. Frank Higgins' home run with Bruce Campbell on base brought in the final pair. The Sox pushed across one tally in the fourth, but were helpless until a futile ninth inning rally produced two runs.

Chicago went ahead in the second game when Luke Appling doubled and Tom Turner singled him home. The Tigers tied the count in the sixth on Rip Radcliff's single and Rudy York's double, his third two-bagger of the day.

The two teams will play off the tie game tomorrow, originally an open date.

Roosevelt Eleven, Under Boyd, Looks to Even Break in 1941

Mentor Chills Hopes for Devastating Season; Nine Lettermen on Huge Squad

Out Petworth way they're talking up a terrific Roosevelt High football team this year, but Coach Artie Boyd thinks twice before offering any glowing predictions.

"We'll win half of our games this season," he says. "I honestly think we can win four, but any more will surprise me. Especially in view of the rumors I hear about some of our competitors—Eastern, Western, Tech and Central."

A 4-won and 4-lost record for Roosevelt, it must be explained, is something like a 10-won and none-lost record for Notre Dame. Until last season the Riders considered any season which listed a single victory quite a success. Then they won three out of eight under Boyd, and their hopes soared.

Schedule Hard

"Remember, we play as tough a schedule as any club in town," Boyd says, explaining his moderate outlook. "There isn't a breather on the card, starting with John Marshall, of Richmond, Friday afternoon."

Whatever fine prospects the Rough Riders enjoy hang on the performances of nine lettermen and one of the largest gangs of inexperienced youngsters ever to turn out.

Already a major shift in last year's lineup, which was good enough to whip Central, has been made. Dick Koester, 190-pound second-team All-Metropolitan end, has been moved to the backfield to bolster a veteran but light group of starters. These will be Carl Sturgess, Bob Stein and Irving Kolker. Newcomers who will see much backfield action are Irwin Lust, Jack Erlich, George Revitz and Ralph Floyd.

Veterans Alex Baroni and George Haines will get the tackle posts, with "Porky" King, a 190 pounder, in reserve. Stan Silverman and Steve Valtos, another scrappy pair with some experience, will be at guard, and the center position will be handled by Bernie Miller, a converted guard.

Indians Win, 14-0; Then Bow To Browns, 3-0

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 21.—The St. Louis Browns and the Cleveland Indians traded shutouts today, the Indians grabbing the opener with a thunderous 14 to 0 count, and the Brownies taking the nightcap, 3 to 0.

Approximately 7500 fans in League Park saw Lefty Al Smith win his eleventh victory of the season for the Tribe by holding the Browns to five hits in the first game, four of them singles. His teammates, including four rookies, backed him up with 18 safeties. Slugger Jeff Heath and Rookie Hank Edwards each tagged four hits out of five trips to the plate.

In the nightcap it was all Mr. Dennis Galehouse. He set the Tribe down with two singles, one by Rookie Edwards and the other by Veteran Kenny Keltner. He fanned eight Indians, and walked only one.

Four S. C. Grid Clashes on Week's Schedule

Duke Opens Season With Wake Forest

Clemson and V. M. I. Also Feature Card; N. C. State Seeks 2d Win Over Davidson

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 21.—Four family clashes involving favorites in the Southern Conference football championship race are highlights for this week on the loop's first full card of the 1941 season.

Duke's highly regarded Blue Devils, favored to annex the title this year and slated to make a serious bid for national recognition, make their debut at home against Wake Forest. Last year the Dukes whipped a strong Wake Forest Club 23-0.

Another standout attraction on the Saturday schedule is the meeting of Clemson's defending champions and Virginia Military Institute's squadron at Lynchburg. In the last game between the two rivals, the Keydets, led by All-Southern Paul Shu, surprised by tying the favored Tigers at Charlotte. V. M. I. has two of the Loop's standout backs in Joe Muha and Bosh Pritchard but will send a green line against the promising Clemson team.

Carolinas Busy

South Carolina plays at North Carolina and North Carolina State and Davidson meet in a night game at Greensboro in Saturday's other circuit tests. The two Carolina universities haven't met on the gridiron for several seasons but State's wolfpack downed Davidson 34-0 last year.

Top games against outsiders are William and Mary's annual jaunt to Annapolis to engage the Navy and Virginia Tech's contest at Kentucky of the Southeastern Conference, William and Mary's Indians, strong this season, lost 7-19 to the Middies last year.

Other loop members will have warmup affairs. Wofford plays at Furman Friday night. Hampden-Sydney goes to Maryland, Sewanee to Washington and Lee, Mount St. Mary's to George Washington.

State Scores

N. C. State opened the loop pennant campaign last night with a 14-7 triumph over a stubborn Richmond club which apparently has been underrated in the pre-season prospecting.

Furman went down 6-32 to Tennessee's Vols in yesterday's only other major game involving conference teams. Clemson rolled over Presbyterian 41-12, North Carolina swamped Lenior-Rhyne 42-6, Virginia Tech downed a passing Catawba club 22-2, William and Mary crushed the Newport News apprentice School 53-0 and Wake Forest blasted the Camp Davis soldiers 65-0. Rollins, of Florida, surprised by holding Davidson to a scoreless tie.

AMERICAN GOLF

Wiffy Cox was again the low scorer as Washington professionals handed another defeat to the visiting Baltimore pros in the second demonstration of American golf yesterday on W. R. Stone's course near Rockville. Lewis Worsham, Al Houghton and Leo Walper played for the District team and Ralph Beach, Carroll McMasters, Jimmy Flattery and Rut Coffey for the Baltimoreans. Only a few persons were in the stands for the test match.

A field of 95 women golfers will compete in the Maryland State Women's Field Day today at Kenwood, including a score of entries from Baltimore. Gross and net prizes will be awarded in the 18-hole event. All players will start before 10:10.

Members of the U. S. G. A. Greens Section will open a two-day conference today at the Arlington Turf Gardens.

Local Colleges Begin Final Week of Drills

Maryland and George Washington Appear Stronger This Season; Hoyas Seem Weaker

By Jack Munhall

The final week's practice for three of the District's four college elevens begins today. What is the outlook as Georgetown, George Washington and Maryland taper off for opening games this weekend?

Generally, the District college football season can be expected to follow the national trend toward more daring and open play. There are several reasons for this pattern. First the determination of the colleges to style their offers more like that of the pros, who have constantly revised their game with an eye to increased attendance. Secondly, the colleges will be more reckless, for draft losses have brought many inexperienced players into the line-up before they were ready. Gambles make for football thrills, and the urge to gamble is a by-product of youth and inexperience.

As a group Georgetown, Maryland, George Washington and also American University, which will open up a week later than its neighbors, appear more evenly balanced than in any year since 1937.

G. W. Week Late

If one were to compare the local colleges on the basis of what each has shown in practice to date, then Maryland would be the surprising choice to lead the parade. There are various factors to be considered at this early date. One is that George Washington is a full week behind all three of the other local elevens in length of training and commensurately so in condition and coordination.

A second is that Georgetown, though disappointing in its two scrimmages with Navy, was meeting in the Middies a far stronger opponent than either George Washington or Maryland has encountered.

To Maryland's advantage are several tangible points. First off, the Old Liners have shown a smoother attack and a better passing offense than either of its rivals. Secondly, their tackling and blocking has been surer and sharper.

Georgetown opens its season Friday night with Ole Miss at Griffith Stadium. Saturday, George Washington goes into action with Mount St. Mary's at Griffith Stadium and Maryland is host to Hampden-Sydney at College Park.

Analyzing the "Big Three":

GEORGETOWN: Coach Jack Hagerty still has one powerful team, but the guess is he'll need at least one more to expect to overpower such opposition as Ole Miss, Boston College and perhaps, G. W. Has potential backfield strength in Dornfeld, Bulvin, McLaughlin, Reiges and Barrett, all of whom can pass and run. Sloppy so far in execution of all fundamentals and especially in guarding against passes. Under coaches such as Hagerty, Dubofsky and Murtagh, blocking and tackling should improve. But pass defense may continue to be a costly weakness. First line near high Georgetown standard. Line reserves weak but improving. General Prospects: No undefeated season likely, but team shouldn't lost more than two games.

GEORGE WASHINGTON: May be 'sleeper" of entire East. Material there and will be well coached, with Reinhart secretly experimenting with formations similar to "T." Has one outstanding back in Fullback Walter Fedora, and a particularly good end in Johnny Picco. Line may be best in town, considering plentiful reserves, and with Seibert filling offensive gap at center. Tackles strengthened over 1940, with John Konizewski a real comer. Passing may be but little better than last season, but Gudmundson and Sophomore Don Pinnow may take up slack there. General prospects: Appears able to handle all opponents with Clemson and Georgetown possible exceptions.

MARYLAND: At least 25 per cent improved over last year, with wealth of nice looking youngsters, especially in backfield where Quarterback Tommy Mont and Fullback Jack Wright seem set. George Barnes, from Western, threatening also to land in the starting line-up. Strong, defensively, at ends and tackles with Cordyack a particularly capable backer-up. May be weak at center of line. Passing attack sparkles, with DuVall, Wright and Jack Brenner, accurate throwers. Wright best Maryland line plunger since Jim Meade. General prospects: Schedule, including Georgetown, Duke and Penn, a bit too tough, but should at least break even for season.

'Flash' Gordon's Foot Injured as N. C. State Wins

By the Associated Press

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 21.—Flash Gordon, N. C. State College's soph wingback from Washington, D. C., suffered an injured—perhaps broken—foot in the Wolfpack's game with the University of Richmond last night and may not be in shape to play against Davidson at Greensboro next Saturday night.

Gordon, who caught a pass from Art Faircloth to score one of State's touchdowns in the 14-7 victory over Richmond, is going to have the foot X-rayed to see if a bone was fractured.

Both Gordon and Faircloth starred at Washington's Anacostia High School and last year topped the scoring of N. C. State's frosh eleven.

let anything or anybody stand in my way. I am not underrating Louis. I think he has been and is now a great fighter, but there never was a fighter who lived that could not be licked, and in this case I know I'm the one to do it. Blow for blow, I think my punching is very close to the caliber of punches that Louis throws, but my ability to take a punch better than he will enable me to enter the ring with an edge on punching. Because of this, I think my chance to win the fight in an early round is better than Louis,' and should the fight go the distance and come down to a test of endurance, I know I'll win because I'm in better condition mentally and physically than the champion

Gulf Stream Poloists Win National Title

By the Associated Press

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Two young players, Alan Corey and Charley von Stade, led Gulf Stream to the National Open polo championship today, whipping Aknusti, 10 to 6, before a crowd of 10,000. Corey, a 1940 graduate of Yale, played his best game at back and scored two goals for the winners, while young von Stade, at No. 3, had four goals to his credit.

Gulf Stream is a newcomer to the list of winners of the championship. Aknusti having taken the title last year, but with a much different team than that riding this afternoon. Ebby Gerry was the only member of last year's winner, and today he rode with his twin brothers, Eddie and Henry and Pete Bostwick. Corey and von Stade had Ben and Mike Phipps up front. Both Phipps brothers scored twice and Eddie Gerry pushed through for four for the losers, with Bostwick getting one and Ebby the other.

Cavalier Pin Team Defeats Del Rio Five

Hap Newman's Cavaliers took upon themselves full measure of glory last night at Del Ray when they won a close match from Herb Cash's Del Rios by the final score of 3019 to 2998, keeping over 400 frenzied spectators on their feet most of the time. Lou Jenkins, ranked Metropolitan Washington's foremost duckpinner, showed his selection was a good one by leading the Cavaliers with a 698 total, which featured high game of the night of 167.

Winning four of the five games, the Cavaliers automatically placed themselves as a match team that will have to be reckoned with during the current season.

Del Rios was led by Hokie Smith's 686, Ed Blakeney's 612 and Astor Clarke's 610. El Geib was second high man for the Cavaliers, with 613 for five games, while Bill King had 389 for three. The Cavaliers also won the doubles match when El Geib and Lou Jenkins totaled 809 to 753 for Astor Clarke and Hokie Smith. Geib was high with 418 for the winners.

Packers Defeat Stubborn Rams

Bay had gained possession in Cleveland territory on an exchange of punts. Canadeo ripped off 15 yards around right end to the 27. Clarke Hinkle and Joe Laws smashed through to the 18 and Canadeo passed to Laws for a touchdown. Hinkle kicked the extra point.

The second Green Bay score came after a march of 69 yards. The Bays started late in the third period, and, with Eddie Jankowski and Hal Van Every carrying the ball, went to the Cleveland seven. Cecil Isbell then passed to Hinkle for a touchdown and Don Hutson added the point with a kick.

A pass interception by Hutson, who brought the ball back 19 yards to the Ram 19, led to the third Packer touchdown. Canadeo ripped right end for seven and after Laws had gained three, raced around right end for the score. Again Hutson converted.

Another pass interception by Green Bay gave the Packers position for their final score. Canadeo pulled the ball down on the 38 and returned to the 16. After a penalty had pushed the Packers back, Herman Rohrig, young Nebraska back, place kicked a field goal from the 36 yard line.

George Washington Opens Ticket Sales

George Washington University today starts sale of tickets for its 1941 home football games, the first Saturday afternoon with Mount St. Mary's at Griffith stadium. There will be no reserved seats at the opener, but for other games some sections will be reserved. Purchase of the tickets may be made at 723 Twenty-first Street Northwest, on the campus, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Griffs Take Double-Header From Macks

Myer moved him to third with a single to left-center. There was nobody out in the inning at that time except Fowler, who was replaced by Rookie Newman Shirley. His first act was to walk Case on four pitches, filling the bases. Doc Cramer skimmed a single over Shortstop Fred Chapman's upstretched glove to get the tying run home, and the winning run scored when Pitcher Shirley mangled Hillis Layne's cheap single into the box. The Athletics hadn't got anybody out in that ninth inning yet.

As for that second game, the Nats were faced with young Fred Caliguiri and Bob Johnson gave Caliguiri a two-run lead in the opening inning, exactly as he had given Fowler in the first game. Johnson singled to center to score both runs after Letchas had muffed Collins' grounder and Valo had beaten out a cheap hit. It looked like a rough inning for Wynn when Miles followed with a single and McCoy walked, but he averted further damage and was a hot article thereafter.

Cecil Travis, who made three hits in the second game, banged a single that cut the A's lead to 2-1 in the first inning, and in the fourth the Nats moved in front 3-2. Vernon singled to left and Ortiz singled to right, Vernon scoring when Miles' throw from the outfield got away from Catcher Wagner. Then Evans tripled into left center and the second run was home.

The game rocked along at 3-2 until the eighth when Chapman gave the Nats an opening by muffing Layne's grounder at the outset. Travis singled to left for his third hit and after Vernon sacrificed, Ortiz walked to fill the bases. Sammy West dumped a single over McCoy's head and two runs were home. Evans flied deep to center and the Nats got the third run of the inning.

The Dodgers were driving again from deep in their own territory when a break gave the Lions their score. Leckonby tossed a pass from his 25 intended for Cardwell, but Ned Mathews rushed in and intercepted the ball on the 40 and with nobody near him raced over the goal. Charles Hanneman came to kick the seventh point from placement.

Coach Bierman Sees Midwest 'Leveled Off'

(This is the first in a series of articles written expressly for International News Service by several of the Nation's leading football coaches and dealing with the gridiron prospects this season in their sections of the country. Today Bernie Bierman, who teams have become a traditional power in the game, discusses the football picture in the Midwest.—Editor.)

By Bernie Bierman

Minneapolis, Sept. 21.—I look for a leveling off of comparative team strength in the Midwest in 1941, particularly in the Western Conference. Here's why:

BIERMAN

In our conference — the Big Ten — the top teams of last season are still good enough to be dangerous, while the second division occupants have increased their potential strength by a good deal.

A year ago, it was Minnesota, Michigan and Northwestern, with Ohio State rated as an early season favorite. At the present writing those Gophers have yet to prove themselves, despite all the predictions that have been made for them, while the Wolverines and Wildcats are having their problems.

In the meantime, Wisconsin and Indiana are definitely on the upgrade, I'm told, with Ohio State, Iowa, Illinois and Purdue looking for improvement.

They all look tough to a coach and if they are on your schedule they are all the more difficult to get by. In our case that goes for Illinois, Michigan, Northwestern, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Fro mthe stndpoint of individual players, the Midwest seems destined to continue its usual high standard. Northwestern has Alf Baumann and Bill Decorrevont, Michigan has Bob Westfall and we have Bruce Smith and Urban Odson back. They are saying that about that Indiana sophomore, Bill Hillenbrand, too.

We don't meet Notre Dame, but the Irish always come up with a good team and I can imagine that Coach Frank Leahy will do just that.

The Big Six is a little out of our territory, but I can tell you about Nebraska. They are always tough. We meet them every year, so I am speaking on good authority.

Bid on Phils Is Declined

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—Gerry Nugent, president of the National League Phillies, said today he had turned down an offer to purchase the baseball club that was made last week by John B. "Jack" Kelly on behalf of a syndicate he heads.

Nugent, watching the crowd pouring into Shibe Park for a double header between Brooklyn and the Phils, said only that he had received Kelly's offer and that he had declined it. He made no other comment.

Kelly, United States director of national physical training for physical fitness, mailed the offer last week saying he thought it was a "very fair one." Neither Nugent nor Kelly disclosed the amount of the bid.

Kelly announced tonight that he had forwarded a copy of the offer to Ford Frick, president of the league, "and we expect to hear from him tomorrow, and until then we don't consider the matter closed."

Outstanding was the play of a bevy of Eagles recruits who flashed the poise and confidence expected of the veteran Pittsburgh eleven.

Art Jones and Elmer Hackney, backfield stars slated to shine for the Steelers' offense were both hurt in the first quarter and carried to the sidelines. They returned to the game later but neither dazzled the fans with the play that made them standouts in the Cleveland Rams game.

24,732 Watch Newark Win Over Royals

By the United Press

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The Newark Bears got back into the fight for International League playoff honors today by edging the Montreal Royals 4 to 3. The final series now stands three games to two, in favor of Montreal, with the remaining two games scheduled for Newark Monday and Tuesday nights.

A crowd of 24,732, an all-time record for International play-offs, ahead on his own single to center, fields.

A ninth-inning rally by the Royals netted one run. An error by Lang, Bears' shortstop, missed a double play and allowed the tying run on base, but Gettel, third Bear moundsman got the Royals out with no further trouble.

Hank Borowy kept the Royals under control until the Bears went ahead on his own single to center, a walk, and a long single by Charlie Kelleher. He was relieved by Russ Christopher in the eighth.

The Bears got a total of nine hits off Macon, Pearce and Mungo, who started in the ninth.

Newark	010	020	100—4 9 1

Borowy, Christopher (8), Gettel (9) and Padden; Macon, Pearce (5), Mungo (9) and Mowell.
(Montreal leads best of seven series, 3-2.)

Parker Captures Net Title Over Frankie Kovacs

By the United Press

Los Angeles, Sept. 21.—Frankie Parker, national clay courts champion, today blasted out a straight set victory over Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., in the championship round of the Pacific Southwest tennis tournament, defeating the clowning youngster, 7—5, 6—0, 6—1.

The veteran Parker played his usual steady game, taking few chances, while Kovacs attempted brilliant smashes which in most cases went out of bound.

Kovacs held a 5-3 lead in the first set but Parker steadily drew up on him to win the set 7-5 and then went on to take nine straight games before Kovacs could take another.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, of Boston captured the women's singles by defeating Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., 6—3, 7—5, although forced to her best game in the second set to down her youthful opponent.

Net Softball Play Continues Tonight

Embassy Glad Windsors Are Not Its Care

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

After many a sleepless night of tossing and turning with the ticklish problem of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, the British Embassy yesterday gave up and tossed the ball to Sir Gerald Campbell, past master at dealing with public opinion.

Sir Gerald, both an expert and a scholar on itinerary-arranging, the situation delicate and feather-smoothing, is arranging the entire trip and all its side sallises. The embassy is prostrate with relief. The last time they had to deal with such a twister, cries of anger and frozen shoulders lasted for months afterwards. The King and Queen themselves weren't too pleased on discovering that someone had fumblingly offended people who should not be offended, invited those who shouldn't have been and cut others off the lists.

This time Sir Gerald will be in charge of the former King and his American duchess and if the faux pas fall, the suave director of British press relations in New York will be more than equal to them.

Answers All Queries

The crack English publicist is even expected to answer the queries floating around the embassy itself. Several of the more socially inclined Britishers attached to the staff were companions of the Duke when he was the Prince of Wales. Others were pals of his in prewar London and practically all of them wonder what kind of formality to stand on now.

It's a well-known fact that the Duke is far touchier about protocol and formality now that he has a blue-eyed American Duchess to protect than he was as the empire's supersalesman and crown prince.

According to the arrangements made by Sir Gerald Campbell with the cooperation of the Duke and Duchess, the anxiously awaited couple will arrive in Washington at the unregal hour of 7:05 a. m., with an entourage of 12 and an undisclosed amount of luggage.

Leave Friday Afternoon

Changing the program to no small degree, instead of being here a quick 24 hours the Duke and Duchess will tarry until Friday afternoon. During these hours of grace for their friends in Washington, they will probably go up and see the Duchess' aunt, Bessie Merryman, whose handsome apartment is filled with pictures of her niece and nephew-in-law.

The extra time poses further difficulties in the way of itinerary and what's-what, but will give the reigning Washington hostesses half a chance to whip something up in the way of a platinum-plated welcome.

On leaving here the duke and duchess proceed to Chicago and thence to the duke's ranch near Calgary in Canada—which he has not seen for many, many years. On their way back to governor's house in Nassau, the Windsors will halt in New York for an undisclosed number of days and moving southward stop off in Baltimore, where the duchess as Wallie Warfield made her debut and budded as an international glamour girl.

She'll Visit Her Uncle

Returning to her native heath, the duchess will visit her uncle, Gen. Henry Warfield, and presumably see a couple of classmates and the old stomping ground.

Last night there seemed to be some doubt here whether the duke and duchess would go to New York to entrain for Chicago or catch the westbound streamliner from here. The embassy would prefer the latter, but other sources seem to think the duchess is very anxious to set foot in New York again—if only between trains. At any rate, on their return they will stay in Manhattan long enough to see a thing or three.

Egyptians Start Moslem Festival Fearing Bombers

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 21 (AP).—The slender, silvery crescent of the Moslem year's ninth moon appeared over Egypt this evening, signaling the start of the holy month of Ramadan.

Ceremonies welcoming the new moon were performed with heavy hearts, for the thought uppermost in Egyptian minds was how many air raids might be carried out in its light and how many might die as a result.

In accordance with age-old custom, two Moslems of "good character and known veracity" testified to the high court that they had seen the new moon and Ramadan was proclaimed open. Because of the blackout mosques were not illuminated, however, as in normal times.

For the next 28 days the Moslem population will eat and drink nothing during the day, but will feast after sundown at ceremonial meals called iftars.

Since the Italians continued raids through the holy month last year, little hope was held that German and Italian bombers—which have been increasingly active recently—will spare Egypt this Ramadan.

U. S. May Soon Be Sending Reds 500 Planes a Month

By the United Press

Aviation experts believed last night that the United States soon may start sending embattled Russia as many as 500 fighting planes—mostly two-engine bombers — a month.

They based this estimate on Britain's apparent willingness to divert large quantities of American-made war materials to the Soviet and the increased tempo of bomber production in this country.

American production of two-engine bombers now is beginning to roll into high gear, these sources said. They pointed out that this type of plane represents one of Russia's most pressing needs in its desperate battle to stem the Nazi wehrmacht and that they could be flown directly to the Red armies, whereas such supplies as tanks and guns must be transported by ship.

U.S. May Be Taken To War in 'Few Days,' Capper Says

By International News Service

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, last night warned that this Nation may be removed only a "matter of days" from involvement in the war.

President Roosevelt, Capper declared, may carry the country into the conflict without the consent of Congress. He said that there is danger that "soon there will be no Congress" in the Constitutional sense, with the increasing abdication of its powers to the Chief Executive.

The Senator sought to clarify a public statement he made a week ago, which he said some quarters had misconstrued to mean that he favored Administration foreign policy. He had said:

"The President having acted, the Congress of the United States and the people of the United States must and will support that action. There is no other course of action open to us."

Last night he asserted:

"This does not mean I approve the action taken, even though I must support it. It does not even mean I believe the President had the right—though I do not question his having the power—to put us into the war.

"It certainly does not mean that I cannot oppose, because I will oppose, the step which may follow—a declaration of war and sending American expeditionary forces abroad to fight in foreign wars. I am utterly and unalterably opposed to that.

Army All Right, Morale Good, Says Reynolds

By International News Service

One of the Senate's most outspoken opponents of President Roosevelt's foreign policy, Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, last night conceded that the organization which may become the chief instrument for carrying out United States foreign policy—the new American Army—is virtually 100 per cent all right.

Reynolds, chairman of the Senate Military Committee, had just made a tour of numerous camps he rode in tanks, he watched them on maneuvers, he fired anti-tank guns, he whipped through the skies in bombers, and he sat down at mess with the boys and ate Army chow.

And last night, back in Washington, he said he wants the country to know that this Nation's new Army of 1,500,000 men, still rapidly expanding, is okay and doing a proper job.

"The stories we hear about low morale are just so much bunk," the Senator said. "There have, of course, been a few isolated instances of ill-adaptation to Army life. But they are comparatively few and far less than might be expected in any Army."

Scientists View Next 50 Years With Optimism

Chicago, Sept. 21 (AP).—The next 50 years of progress in science was previewed today by scientists arriving for the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the University of Chicago.

Despite the war, there was no pessimism in a series of sidewalk interviews among the men and women carrying on research in hundreds of university and commercial laboratories. Their attitude is one of distinct optimism for the world to come when the war is over.

Economists agreed that the post-war period may be more difficult than the war period itself as the Nation goes through a period of reconstruction and readjustment. "Taxation will remain high for some years to come, many people will be out of work, but the resources of the country are and will be sufficient to carry the Nation through such an emergency until the time when domestic and international trade is again established on sound economic principles," they declared.

Opening of Bids For Alexandria Project Deferred

Opening of competitive bids on a 120-unit housing project in Alexandria, for this afternoon at 2, had been deferred until September 30 to allow contractors more time in which to compile their estimates, Director R. S. Marshall, of Alexandria Housing Authority, said last night.

The project will be developed under supervision of the Alexandria authority on a 19-acre site on Duke Street Extended, adjacent to a 225-home development now under construction for civilian workers employed at Ft. Belvoir.

Contractors have been asked to bid on the conventional type of masonry construction, and an experimental type recently developed by housing authority architects. Preference probably will be given to the bids on the experimental-type homes, Marshall said.

The project is expected to cost about $450,000, the maximum set for a defense housing project of this type under the Lanham Community Facilities Act.

A. F. L. Is Accused Of Selling Defense Jobs by C. I. O.

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 21 (AP).—The Iowa-Nebraska States Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.) charges tonight A. F. of L. building trades unions are "selling national defense jobs under the disguise of closed shop contracts" at the Des Moines ordnance plant.

The charge was contained in a resolution adopted by the council, central body for the Congress of Industrial Organization Unions in the two States.

The resolution asserted A. F. of L. building trades unions require payment of "as much as $10" toward initiation fees before an applicant for work at the plant is considered. The Iowa State employement service offered assurance there would be no discrimination against C. I. O. members but has "turned over to the building trades officials control over jobs at the plant," the resolution charged.

Ex-Chief Justice Of Minnesota Dies

Milwaukee, Sept. 21 (AP).—John P. Devaney, 59, of Minneapolis, former chief justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court, died here today. Active in the Democratic Party, he was en route to Washington, for a conference with Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, about the 1942 campaign in Minnesota and his projected candidacy for Senator.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. August Wagner Breweries, Inc., Plaintiff, vs. Max Wagner and Richard Wagner, Defendants. Civil Action No. 11961. The object of this suit is to require the Commissioner of Patents to issue registration to the plaintiff, August Wagner Breweries, Inc., for a trademark "Augustiner." This action arises under the trademark laws of the United States, Title 15, U. S. C. A. Section 81, and following; and is brought under Section 4915 of the Revised Statutes, Title 35, U. S. C. A. Section 63, as amended. On motion of the plaintiff it is this 16th day of September, 1941, ordered that the defendants Max Wagner and Richard Wagner, copartners trading under the firm name and style of Joseph Wagner Bierbrauerei zum Augustiner, Landsbergerstrasse 31, Munich, Germany, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, before said day. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By JULIA W. SHIPLEY, Assistant Clerk. 22,29,6

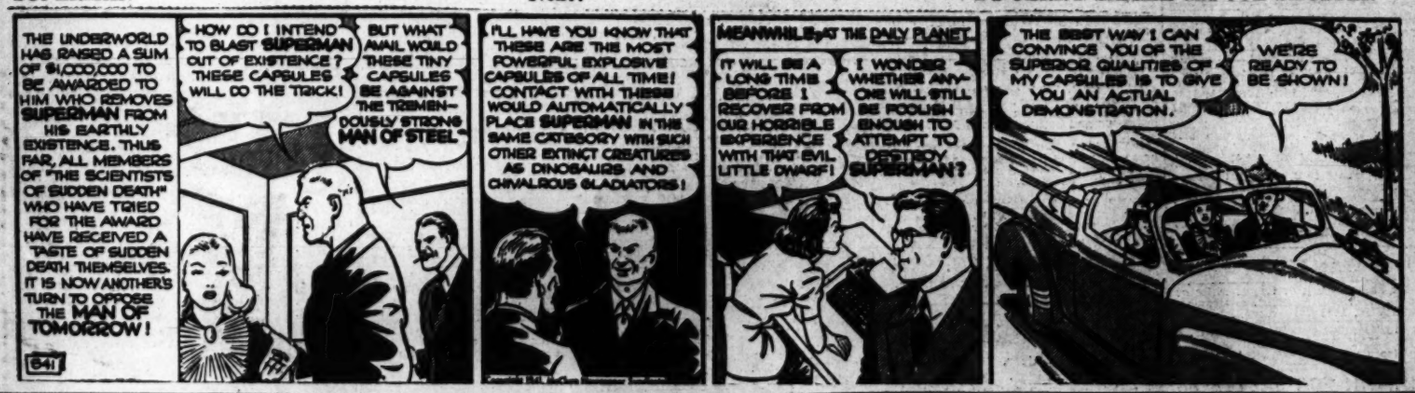
SUPERMAN — Next! — BY JERRY SIEGEL and JOE SHUSTER



THE UNDERWORLD HAS RAISED A SUM OF $1,000,000 TO BE AWARDED TO HIM WHO REMOVES SUPERMAN FROM HIS EARTHLY EXISTENCE. THUS FAR, ALL MEMBERS OF "THE SCIENTISTS OF SUDDEN DEATH" WHO HAVE TRIED FOR THE AWARD HAVE RECEIVED A TASTE OF SUDDEN DEATH THEMSELVES. IT IS NOW ANOTHER'S TURN TO OPPOSE THE MAN OF TOMORROW!
HOW DO I INTEND TO BLAST SUPERMAN OUT OF EXISTENCE? THESE CAPSULES WILL DO THE TRICK!
BUT WHAT AVAIL WOULD THESE TINY CAPSULES BE AGAINST THE TREMENDOUSLY STRONG MAN OF STEEL!
I'LL HAVE YOU KNOW THAT THESE ARE THE MOST POWERFUL EXPLOSIVE CAPSULES OF ALL TIME! CONTACT WITH THESE WOULD AUTOMATICALLY PLACE SUPERMAN IN THE SAME CATEGORY WITH SUCH OTHER EXTINCT CREATURES AS DINOSAURS AND CHIVALROUS GLADIATORS!
MEANWHILE, AT THE DAILY PLANET
IT WILL BE A LONG TIME BEFORE I RECOVER FROM OUR HORRIBLE EXPERIENCE WITH THAT EVIL LITTLE DWARF!
I WONDER WHETHER ANY-ONE WILL STILL BE FOOLISH ENOUGH TO ATTEMPT TO DESTROY SUPERMAN?
THE BEST WAY I CAN CONVINCE YOU OF THE SUPERIOR QUALITIES OF MY CAPSULES IS TO GIVE YOU AN ACTUAL DEMONSTRATION.

Listen! with Glynn

John Charles Daly's chickens are coming home to roost in a nice way.

Columbia's and WJSV's special events announcer has spent every Sunday for the past few months narrating CBS's defense program, called "The Spirit of '41." And now at the vast war maneuvers in Louisiana he is meeting again, to his profit the many officers and men he made friends with on that series.

Daly is covering the Red Second Army in its struggle with the Blue Third Army and telling you about it every afternoon at 3:30. With 500,000 troops engaged in a wilderness of few roads and poor communications, he assures us a friend in khaki can be a priceless source of information.

Blue parachute troops landed behind the Red lines in a raid that made the story of the day. No press or radio correspondent was allowed to witness their landing, but Daly discovered them after they were taken prisoners—and discovered that they were old acquaintances whom he'd met while broadcasting activities of the 502d Parachute Battalion at Fort Benning, Ga., a few weeks ago.

As a result, by interviewing them, he was the only correspondent around who was able to tell the story of the attack and what had happened as a result.

The Post Radio Highlights

WJSV, 5:30—Dr. George N. Shuster, of the board of Loyal Americans of German Descent, answers Senator Nye's Steuben Society speech.

WMAL, 8—Salute of Champions to the Army and Navy: Betty Grable, Lana Turner, Rita Hayworth, Ann Sheridan, Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio, Dizzy Dean, Swede Larson and Bo McMillan star on this hour-long program of glamour, sports and what-have-you.

WMAL, 9—Part of the "Pop" Concert from Riverside Stadium, featuring music by Johann Strauss.

Contract Bridge

Today's hand, taken from a friendly family match, was played by contributor D. L., at a risky four-spade contract. This is what he says of the difficulties facing him:

"One heart, three spades (club ruff) and a diamond looked like sure losers; maybe more if the hand got stuck. But a trick play at trick two escaped the heart loser; then at trick eight a good diamond was trumped for an entry to dummy; at trick eleven the ace of clubs was discarded—then the coup.

"It was a thrilling hand to play and make—the type of hand that makes bridge so enjoyable."

The queen of clubs was opened and taken by the king in dummy. The heart jack was returned at once, and when East played small, declarer's singleton queen won the trick. A small trump from the closed hand was won by the ace from West, who cashed the diamond ace and continued a small diamond. East playing the queen and declarer the king.

A small trump was led to dummy's king and the heart king returned, East this time putting on the ace. South ruffed, and needing an entry to dummy, played the good jack of diamonds and trumped on the board, establishing a trump coup situation over East.

Dummy's ten, nine of hearts were led, East following suit and declarer discarding two small clubs. On the play of another heart from the board East decided to throw off a diamond and South let go his ace of clubs. He then followed with dummy's last heart, and as he held the jack-eight of trumps over East's queen-ten he had to make a spade for the game-going trick. He lost only the ace, queen of trumps and the diamond ace.

Brewster to Leave U. S. Bench Oct. 15

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 21 (AP).—The retirement of Elisha H. Brewster as United States district judge for Massachusetts has been accepted by President Roosevelt, effective October 15.

Brewster has been on the bench in the Massachusetts district since October, 1922, and has reached the retirement age of 70.

He submitted his resignation to Mr. Roosevelt last Monday and the Chief Executive accepted it in a letter dated yesterday. The President said he regretted that the Federal judiciary was "losing the benefit of your eminent capabilities" and expressed his appreciation "of the conscientious and outstanding services that you have rendered."

BARRY BROTHERS BAND TO METRONOME. Those American boys who won renown in South America, the Barry Brothers and their orchestra, will open in the Wardman Park Hotel's Metronome Room on next Friday, September 26. They come to Washington almost directly from the famed Copocabana of Rio de Janeiro.

Paul and James Barry alternately lead their band, Paul playing violin and James on the piano and accordion. The orchestra has three intriguing specialty groups, the "Three Singing Violins," "Three Barry-Tones" (vocalists) and "Four Bars of Swing" (rhythm quartet). Stars of the band include Carlos Malla, guitarist-vocalist specializing in Pan-American songs; Eric Marshall, singer-saxist-clarinetist-violinist; and Earl Geiger, former trumpet coloist with the late Hal Kemp who originated the "glissando" trumpet style. This distinctly topflight band will give Metronome a flying start on what promises to be its biggest season.

The Casino Royal "Fall Opening Week" starts today and looks like a whizzeroo. There'll be an extra fancy floor revue and Maestro Jack Shaffer promises to keep on unreeling those new songs he's been rehearsing for weeks.

TODAY'S STAR EVENT is the opening of Paul Kain's Five in Mayfair. This is the same crackerjack unit that made Mayfairites so happy last winter except that singer Mary Byrne, a lovely Texan, will replace Adele Van who, we hear, is going West to rejoin her family who left Washington last summer. Sammy Ferro will pound the drums, blow the trombone, clown all over the place again. Ken Foy will be at the piano, Billy Gibson will play his giant electric guitar. And Maestro Paul, most important of all, will be doing his inimitable tricks on sax and clarinet. Yessir, it's going to be smooth sailing at Mayfair.

TOMMY JOHNSON

ace pianist-organist, who opens today in Burt's Trans-Lux

FACES AROUND PLACES. Lounge Riviera. Major George Fielding Eliot with Charlie Daly, Albert Warner and Paul Glynn of Troika, William Knudsen enjoying Sasha Lukas' violin solos . . . the air waves . . . Restaurant "823." Advertising man George Canby asking Jane Marlow and the Heintze boys to play that spot of musical serenity, "Poet and Peasant" . . . Hi Hat. Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Conn, both with elegant tans after their lengthy Atlantic City vacation, and Mrs. Conn looking no end elegant in a costume combining white, red and black . . . Shoreham. Martin Codel, radio magazine publisher, greeting Barnee.

All that tearing up of the former Dick's Grill means that Tom O'Donnell has bought the spot, will add it to his E Street ensemble of two restaurants. Dick Ashby is looking for another location.

THE JUVENILE WONDERS. An astounding bunch of young people are the Neptune Room's new Three Buds and Three Buddies and pianist Walter Liberace. All are of collegiate age but finished troupers. Liberace, now only 22, has been guest soloist with several of the country's top symphony orchestras. He gives impressive performances of the classics, also has the gift of improvising lovely tone poems . . . Three Buds and Three Buddies are a bunch of young ginger snaps under the leadership of Shorty Allen. They have a repertoire of 200 original arrangements of modern songs.

HELPING BRITAIN. Britishers are very hard to please about their tea. So the Mayflower Lounge management wishes it known that they will concoct tea exactly according to any ritual preferred by English visitors. They will produce silver pots, pottery pots, any kind of tea, even tea cozies. Anything to please.

A RARE MENU COLLECTION is owned by Arthur D'Marchisio, maitre d'hotel of the Raleigh. Many of the menus are mementos of London parties given around the turn of the century. There's a souvenir medal and menu of a dinner given in celebration of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee in 1897 at the Princess Restaurant in London. Another item, a bit on the hotsy-totsy side, is the menu of a dinner party given in 1901 by Sir Robert Pell for LaBelle Otero, the Marlene Dietrich of her day. Her picture is on the cover, revealing her as a creature of sumptuous curves.

Ray Richardson, of the Rainbow Room orchestra, has three interlocking ambitions,—to take his three bosses, Meyer Davis, Dave McWilliams and Milton Davis for rides in his private plane. So far, they've all declined,—regretfully (?).

"HI! NEIGHBOR," as sung and stepped to by the Dancettes, sets the friendly key of the current Lotus revue. Later on the Dancettes frolic around with silver fringed hoops, wind up with a dynamic jive number. Dancers Barbara and Leslie do "Begin the Beguine" with finance and daring, accomplish whirls that make 'em look like a human kaleidoscope. We still can't get over the way Magico Les Hunt folds lighted ciragettes into a handkerchief without starting a fire. The hankie must be made of asbestos.

"SHOLE MOLLE" was an item that long puzzled us on the Plymouth beverage list. Proprietor Carl Fink tells us that "Shole Molle" is just Rhine wine and seltzer, one of the lightest and most delightful of drinks.

A BUSY SUMMER was enjoyed by Don Carper and his Four before they recently returned to the Cafe Caprice. They played both in Buffalo and in New York's Copocabana, filled no end of radio engagements and made a large group of recordings that are now on the market. Their regular summer radio program was known as "Hawaiian Moods."

LOG TAVERN DOINGS. Larry Black's New York band has scored niftily with Log Tavern patrons. Smart, fresh and brightly arranged, the Black dance rhythms are a large portion of all right.

Kavako's Grill will toss a humdinger of a "Fall Opening Party" on next Thursday evening. Noisemakers, fancy trimmings, hobby horse races, vaudeville 'n everything. Myomy!

Abductor Kills Woman, Self in Crash

By the Associated Press

Elizabethtown, Ky., Sept. 21.—A kidnaped Columbus, Ohio, mother who was visiting her soldier son at Fort Knox, her abductor and a young civilian were killed in a head-on auto collision near here early today.

The dead are Mrs. Ruth M. Bentz, 46, mother of Private John A. Bentz, jr., a selectee from Columbus; E. J. Bean, 33, of Broken Arrow, Okla., identified as Mrs. Bentz's kidnaper, and Eugene Myers, 21, of Elizabethtown, a civilian employe at Fort Knox.

State Patrolman G. C. Ray, who reported the accident, said that Bean forced Private Bentz and his visiting girl friend, Miss Ruth Vore, 20, also of Columbus, out of their car near Fort Knox and compelled Mrs. Bentz to remain in the car as he drove off, a military police detachment in pursuit.

The patrolman reported that Bean's "flying" car passed down the highway "on the wrong side of the road" and crashed into an auto carrying Myers and three other young persons, all of whom were injured seriously.

Ray termed Bean's action "kidnaping," but did not provide a motive.

The State policeman said Bean had been dismissed as an employe at an Elizabethtown filling station last night for being intoxicated while working.

John A. Bentz, sr., 54, of Columbus, husband of the crash-kidnap victim, arrived here today after talking with his son and Miss Vore, gave Patrolman Ray this version:

Mrs. Bentz, Miss Vore and Private Bentz rode to Louisville last night and en route gave a ride to Bean, who was hitch-hiking.

Bean apparently stayed with the trio in Louisville and rode back to Fort Knox with them. When they neared the fort, Bean suddenly drew a knife and threatened to kill the three.

From the back seat, he forced young Bentz, who was driving, to stop the car, ordered the young man and Miss Vore to leave, and then drove off swiftly with Mrs. Bentz, whom he commanded at knife-point to remain.

Young Bentz then notified State police who blocked the highway at Elizabethtown and the military police who immediately gave chase.

Ray said Mrs. Bentz was dead when he arrived at the wreckage scene. Myers died en route to the hospital and Bean died at the Fort Knox Hospital late this morning.

Watson Accepts Bid to Head Art Week Group

Thomas J. Watson, of New York, president of the International Business Machines Corporation, has accepted the invitation of President Roosevelt as sponsor, to serve as chairman of the National Council for Art Week, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Florence Kerr, chairman of the committee of Federal agencies for Art Week.

The dates for the second annual nation-wide observance have been set for November 17 to 23. Through committees in every State and hundreds of communities, the council will arrange to place on sale the works of American artists and craftsmen and emphasize the place of art in the home, cultural and business life of the people.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his letter to Watson, said:

"It is evident that, if we are to preserve the essential values of our way of life as clarified and renewed through the free creative exercise of our art skills, we must begin by finding ways by which these skills may be maintained in our communities. Thus Art Week, in endeavoring to secure a means of livelihood for the artists and craftsmen of America, becomes also a practical program for safeguarding the cultural resources of America."

Wind-Fanned Fire Razes More Than 90 Istanbul Houses

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 21.—A spectacular fire fanned by a high wind raged through the historic patriarchate of the Greek Orthodox Church and more than 90 dwellings upon the golden horn of Istanbul from 3:45 until 10 o'clock this morning.

The blaze, starting in the wooden section of the patriarch's dwelling place shortly after 3 o'clock this morning, rapidly got out of control. The fire was reported to have destroyed the historic throne room and Byzantine relics, said to be of inestimable value. The cause of the blaze, according to reports from Istanbul, was an electrical short-circuit.

Joan of Arc Window Is Dedicated

More than 1000 worshipers looked on yesterday as the Joan of Arc window was dedicated at the Washington Cathedral, with the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Dean of Washington and Bishop Coadjutor-elect of Maryland, presiding.

First of twenty nave aisle windows to be placed, that of Joan of Arc memorializes Ethelyn Sarratt Talbott, and was donated by her parents, Col. and Mrs. S. G. Talbott, of the Westchester Apartments.

Dean Powell, who presided in the absence of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, who was stricken with appendicitis during the weekend, read the services of dedication and prayers before the window. Choristers and clergy stood by in a semicircle.

Prior to the formal dedication, Dean Powell briefly reviewed the history of the stained glass that had come from England, explaining that two ships bearing the glass were torpedoed but that the third vessel arrived safely. The packing crate bore the large letters: Britain Delivers the Goods.

Assisting in the dedication were Canons T. O. Wedel, William Curtis Draper, jr., E. S. Dunlap, Merritt Williams and Charles W. F. Smith. Following the dedication, Dean Powell preached at the regular 11 o'clock worship services.

U. S. Hunting For Specialists In Many Fields

The Federal Government is running a fine-tooth comb through specialized fields of work to find qualified personnel to help in the national defense program.

Particularly sought now are information writers and broadcasters. Previous examinations failed to get sufficient qualified persons to meet the demands, the Civil Service Commission said.

Examinations call for senior information specialist, $4600 a year; information specialist, $3800; associate information specialist, $3200, and assistant information specialist, $2600. The deadline on applications is October 23.

The Weather Bureau has vacancies in positions of assistant observer of meteorology, paying $1620 a year. Jobs paying $1260 and $1440 may also be filled from the employment registers established in this examination.

Also wanted are inspectors of Naval ordnance materials. Salaries are from $1620 to $2600 a year. Duty will be in the field wherever assigned.

Other examinations open are for dairy-barn attendant, $1320; molder, for employment at the Norfolk Navy Yard, $8.48 to $9.44 a day; furnaceman, heater, $5.76 to $6.72 a day, for Navy Yard, Washington; operator, gas plant, $8 to $8.96 a day, for the Norfolk Navy Yard, and statistician for the Agricultural Marketing Service, $2000 to $2600, with other positions from $1620 to $2300. Junior physicists, at $2000 a year, are wanted.

Divorced Wife Of Ricardo Cortez Burns to Death

Santa Ana, Calif., Sept. 21 (AP).—Mrs. Christine Conniff Cortez, divorced wife of screen actor Ricardo Cortez, died today of burns suffered yesterday when she fell asleep in bed with a lighted cigaret.

The tragedy occurred at a seashore cottage Mrs. Cortez recently rented at nearby Laguna Beach. She was brought to a hospital here, burned from head to foot.

Cortez, who was divorced from Mrs. Cortez in June, 1940, after a six-year marriage, came here from Hollywood immediately upon being informed of the accident.

Officials of Miners Protesting Union Dues Vote to End Strike

By the Associated Press

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 21.—Officers of 38 of the 42 United Mine Workers locals in District 7, where 20,000 anthracite diggers have been idle almost two weeks in protest against increased union dues and assessments, voted today to return to work and submit their grievances to a commission named by International President John L. Lewis.

The officers voted 126 to 1 in favor of the back to work proposal and arranged to ask their local memberships to ratify the action tomorrow.

At the same time, however, insurgent miners declared at a mass meeting in nearby Freeland they would return to work only if union dues were limited to $14 a year and the National Labor Relations Board supervised an election of new district officers. Garret Miller, of Nesquehoning, leader of the revolt, announced the insurgents would march into District 1's Scranton and Wilkes-Barre region tomorrow in an effort to spread the protest by an "appeal to reason."

The work stoppage began September 10 and has forced the shutdown of every mine in the district. The miners are protesting an increase in district dues of from $1 to $1.50 per month and an International Union assessment increase of from $2 to $6.

At Scranton, Michael J. Kosik, president of District 1, appealed to the 44,000 miners in the district to ignore the appeals to join the protest.

The company said it had sent a telegram to Sidney Hillman, co-chief of the Office of Production Management, requesting mediation.

The message said a 5-cent blanket increase paid on July 24 should now be matched with another 5-cent blanket increase to place the plant on a parity with all other Southern California aircraft companies.

Union officials said the actual walkout, if necessary, probably would not be called before Monday, September 29.

Negotiations with the company, which holds $750,000,000 in defense orders for land and seaplane bombers, were broken off Friday when the firm declined to grant the union's demand for a blanket 10-cent-an-hour wage increase.

Tieup Threatened

New York, Sept. 21 (AP).—C. I. O. workers at the Ford Instrument Co. plant in Long Island City today authorized their leaders to call a strike if efforts to obtain a contract satisfactory to them fail.

The company, described by union officials as a subsidiary of the Sperry Gyroscope Co., is producing fire control equipment for the U. S. Navy.

The ysaid the strike call was authorized at a closed meeting attended by 1400 of the plant's 3000 employes.

Spokesmen for the union, Local 425 of the United Instrument Workers of the United Electric and Radio Machine Workers of America, said the C. I. O. affiliate's present agreement with the company expires September 30 and that the company has refused to grant a 20-cent-an-hour wage increase for experienced men and a 65-cent-an-hour scale for learners. The present wage scale was not disclosed.

The union's executive board said the company had made a profit of $7,854,901 in 1940 and $4,084,901 in the first six months of 1941, and could well afford the increase.

"The union wishes to state that it is ready to utilize all available agencies, the State or National Mediation Board, in order to bring the negotiations to a peaceful and mutually satisfactory conclusion," a statement by the union said.

Plane Plant Faces Strike

San Diego, Calif., Sept 21 (AP).—Arbitration of its wage dispute with A. F. L. machinists was asked tonight by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, as the union completed arrangements for tomorrow's strike vote.
